Jordan River Fire Out of Control

THE BYRDS
ARE THE EGGS FRESH?
YOU KIDDIN'? THE CHICKEN'S STILL CRYING!

A forest fire 12 kilometers north of Jordan River has spread to 50 acres and is blazing out of control, a provincial forest ranger said today.

Waterbombers and helicopters are battling the inferno from the air while 35 men and heavy equipment attempt to halt its movement on the ground, the spokesman said.

The fire had covered about half an acre when reported Tuesday about one mile west of Diversion Reservoir.

Aided by fanning winds, it had ripped through more than 12 acres by Wednesday evening.

Lower temperatures today are helping to cool things off, the ranger said.

But he said a fog bank moving in off the ocean is hindering the operation of the aircraft.

Meanwhile a threat of a new outbreak of forest fires in B.C. started by lightning storms has become a major worry for firefighters, a forests ministry spokesman said Wednesday.

Don Owen, director of forest protection, said 597 fires were burning Wednesday, 50 of them started in the previous 24 hours.

A lightning storm Tuesday night in north-central B.C. touched off at least 19 new fires and brought with it only a trace of rain.

"We have seen hundreds of new fires started up by a single lightning storm hitting across southern B.C.," said Owen.

He said that although about 2,000 firefighters were keeping the over-all fire situation under reasonable control, there appears to be no immediate relief in site with hot and dry weather forecast.

Bob Gibbs, Kamloops forest district officer, said new lightning storms could touch off many fires in area forests which have received no rain since July 16.

The Kamloops district, with 180 fires burning, has been one of the hardest-hit areas in B.C.

"Fires near populated areas are not difficult to fight because there are access roads and because men and equipment from the towns can be brought to fight the fire quickly."

Firefighters were reported Wednesday to have contained a fire about 45 kilometres west of Parksville.

Walt Schultz, assistant district fire ranger, said crews had succeeded in containing the fire to 1,500 acres from 2,000 acres but rain will be needed to snuff it out.

Officials set last weekend's firefighting bill at $1.7 million and estimated the total cost of fighting fires so far this summer at about $9 million.

REALLY A GRANNY

CHICAGO (UPI) — A mystery mummy found in a mass tomb of Egyptian kings and queens nearly 100 years ago has been identified as King Tutankhamen's grandmother.

Prof. Edward F. Wente of the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute said Wednesday the mummy of an elderly lady is believed to be Queen Tiye, grandmother of Tutankhamen.

PREMIERS CLOSE RANKS

Levesque Backs Queen Over PM

Times News Services

REGINA — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said today he agrees with his nine fellow premiers in the need to defend the monarchy against constitutional changes proposed by the federal government.

"I think it's not basically a defence of the monarchy but a defence of basic federal democracy," Levesque told reporters as he entered the final formal sessions of the annual premiers conference here.

His comments came as the premiers prepared to close ranks against Prime Minister Trudeau's latest proposals to alter the country's underlying constitutional law, the 1867 British North America Act.

All 10 premiers have united to oppose Trudeau proposals to transform the Senate, alter the Supreme Court of Canada and make the Governor-General the head of state when the Queen is not in Canada.

Levesque said such a move would mean the federal government could change the head of state whenever it wanted to. That would lead "to more federal unilateralism."

"We might as well keep it the way it is," Levesque said of Canada's constitutional monarchy.

Two western premiers, meanwhile, said today they were satisfied with the emphasis placed on the economy at the annual premier's meeting.

Both Alberta's Peter Lougheed and Sterling Lyon, of Manitoba, came to the annual premiers conference concerned more with economic than constitutional matters.

They told reporters there had been full discussion Wednesday and the economy was to be considered again today.

"I was concerned we would be down-playing the economic side in favor of the constitutional side — that didn't happen," Lougheed said.

Someone Pulled The Plug

RETFORD, England (AP) — Citizens of this little Midlands market town woke up Thursday to find a mile and a half of their 200-year-old canal had disappeared.

Someone had pulled the plug out.

Police called in to investigate found that workmen dredging the canal had pulled up a heavy iron chain along with an assortment of rusty bicycles, baby carriages and bedsteds.

They yanked on the chain—and up came a giant wooden plug. The water slowly gurgled down the plughole and into the nearby River Idle.

"We're having a new plug made so we can refill the canal," said a police spokesman.

The plug may have been there since the canal was cut in 1777, said a spokesman for the British Waterways Authority, which is responsible for looking after Britain's canal network.

"We hope to have the stretch filled with water again in a couple of days. Luckily there is plenty of water in other stretches—provided the plugs are left alone."

SLIMMING THE FAT BIG ENERGY-SAVER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Journal of Public Health says if every fat American slimmed down to an ideal weight, the U.S. would save the energy equivalent of 1.3 billion gallons of gasoline.

Once the people completed their diets and stayed slim, the energy saved each year could run nearly one million cars, the journal said in its August issue.

Authors Bruce M. Hannon and Timothy G. Lohman said they reached that conclusion by estimating the number of overweight people, the average degree of overweight, and the amount of energy that goes into producing, marketing and cooking food.

If translated into the electricity demands of big cities, the energy saving from dieting Americans would meet the electricity needs of Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., all rolled into one, the article said.

They calculated the total adult excess weight in the nation is 2.3 billion pounds. They assumed the average dieter would try to cut his meals down by around 600 calories a day. They estimated how long it would take for the people to reach something like ideal weight and maintain it.

Then the authors consulted two studies for estimating the energy that goes into food production: one study calculating the energy per calorie used in planting, harvesting, processing, marketing and cooking food; the other study estimating the percentage of U.S. energy requirements tied up in food production and consumption.

Blazes Ravage Calif.

CAZADERO, Calif. (UPI) — A violent forest fire raged out of control in a resort area north of San Francisco today, burning homes and sending vacationers fleeing from the flames that raced across the tops of redwood and pine trees.

"It is bad right now," said state Division of Forestry spokesman Ed Karman from the fire control centre at Santa Rosa.

All telephone lines to the community of Cazadero were cut and officials prepared for a total evacuation of the area.

Israel Pushes Peace Pact

Times News Services

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today Israel will do "anything possible" to reach agreement with Egypt at next month's peace summit called by President Carter.

"We want at Camp David an agreement," Begin said after a 2½-hour cabinet meeting in Jerusalem.

"We shall do anything possible from our point of view to reach such an agreement," Begin said before resuming his first vacation since taking office more than a year ago.

The cabinet, called to order to hear a report on the meeting between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at Alexandria, Egypt, made no decisions today.

But Begin said some decisions will be necessary to prepare for the Sept. 5 meeting at Carter's Maryland mountain retreat.

Meanwhile, Eygyptian foreign ministry officials say their country plans a diplomatic campaign to explain to fellow Arabs why Sadat agreed to attend the summit.

They said Sadat accepted Carter's invitation to the Sept. 5 meeting because new elements were introduced into the deadlocked Middle East peace-seeking process.

One important element, the Al-Gomhouria newspaper said today, was a U.S. pledge to become a "full partner" in the negotiations. The other was the idea of the unprecedented three-way summit itself.

Stuck In Mud, Ignored

EDMONTON (CP) — A 68-year-old man was stuck on a mud bank of the North Saskatchewan River for two days before he was rescued.

Police said scores of people walked or cycled past Gregory Kologyczuk, marooned near a park's pedestrian bridge, without going to his aid.

He was finally spotted by a passer-by Tuesday night. Five policemen eventually hauled him up a four-metre embankment and sent him to hospital, where he was later released.

Police said Kologyczuk was walking along the bank of the river when he slipped down the steep embankment.

Steve Koenig, one of the police constables who rescued Kologyczuk said at first, they thought they were picking up a body. The man was covered with mud, his hands swollen and his head caked with dried mud.

"I splashed some water on his face to revive him and he came to life," Koenig said.

Pot Worth Risk for Cancer Patients

VANCOUVER (CP) — Many persons being treated for cancer in B.C. are ignoring the law and smoking marijuana because they say the drug controls nausea caused by anti-cancer drugs.

Some patients say marijuana controls nausea better than conventional anti-nausea drugs. And some doctors say they feel the patient's chances of recovery are improved because they are stronger and respond better to treatment if they are not always nauseated.

But unless Ottawa approves a two-year-old application from several Vancouver doctors to do a controlled study of marijuana with volunteer patients, the actual medical value of the drug might not be determined for some time, doctors say.

Meanwhile, patients continue to risk a criminal record and pay high black-market prices for the illegal medication of unknown potency and purity.

Patricia Isert, 37, a housewife in Coquitlam, about 30 kilometres east of here, says she uses the drug and allowed her name to be published although it could result in criminal charges being laid against her.

"I'm willing to take the risk," she said, "just like I was taking a risk when I used it (marijuana)."

A non-smoking mother of two, with no history of drug use, she says she used marijuana many times to relieve severe nausea induced by chemotherapy for Hodgkin's disease.

She said the life of a cancer victim under treatment is a dismal one.

"It's not a pleasant business and to have nausea on top of it . . . to have something to prevent it and not use it, is just criminal."

Mrs. Isert said she has not used marijuana except when she was receiving cancer drugs. She said she has not used it recently after her doctors prescribed a drug to which she does not react so violently.

A 67-year-old grandmother said she obtained some marijuana from her grandchildren. They assured her that she would not get high, but merely relaxed.

The drug helped her sleep soundly despite the pain from a tumor, she said, and eliminated persistent nausea.

Mrs. Isert's doctor, Kenneth Swenerton, an internal medicine specialist, said there are hundreds of cancer patients in B.C. using marijuana to combat nausea.

New Polio Case in Ont.

Times News Services

Two more Ontario residents were confirmed Wednesday as victims of polio, bringing to six the number of Canadian cases confirmed through laboratory tests.

An Ontario health ministry official said one other case of polio has been clinically diagnosed, but not confirmed by laboratory tests. That victim is in hospital.

Three families are in isolation in their farm homes near Lethbridge after some members developed flu-like symptoms which health officials suspect could be early signs of polio.

A spokesman for the Barons-Eureka Health Unit north of Lethbridge said Wednesday the families are members of a conservative faction of the Netherlands Reformed Congregation. The group views vaccinations as human interference in the will of God.

An eight-year-old boy living north of Lethbridge, the only confirmed polio case in the Lethbridge area, belongs to the same church.

Tests in B.C. have confirmed paralytic polio in Jake Van de Pol, a 25-year-old mushroom farmer from Chilliwack, who health officials said contracted the disease from a 17-year-old cousin visiting from the Netherlands.

The latest confirmed cases in Ontario, all in Oxford County and adjacent Norfolk County, bring the province's total to four.

In Calgary, Dr. David Hosking, city medical health officer, said adult immunization has been suspended because of dwindling supplies. He said the city's available supply must be reserved for children.

Earlier Wednesday, health officials in B.C., Alberta and Ontario said there was plenty of vaccine for persons who have not been immunized if they do not overreact.

In Toronto, a spokesman for Connaught Laboratories Ltd., Canada's major supplier of polio vaccine, said city residents are on an unnecessary binge for immunization.

He said there is no immediate shortage of Salk or Sabin vaccine, but if the demand continues, a shortage would occur.

The spokesman emphasized that there is no need for alarm.

"There are something like a half a dozen cases across the country of 22 million people. That's hardly being out of control."

SOCKEYE CLOSURE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian and United States convention waters will be closed for sockeye salmon fishing for the rest of the week to increase the escapement of spawners, the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission has decided.

The commission will meet again Friday to assess the situation and assign fishing dates for next week.

Premiers Close Ranks On Constitution Issue

He said he would prefer it if "we concentrate on getting the Canadian economy moving and consider the constitution as a second priority."

He added a federal election "from an economic point of view might clear the air."

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan sad he was returning home and would call a provincial election "immediately," if there is no federal election.

"I am examining the possibility of a fall election," Regan said. "I'd just like to know what they're going to do because then I'd know what we should do in Nova Scotia."

On Wednesday, Levesque and Lougheed challenged Prime Minister Trudeau on Wednesday to end constitutional and economic uncertainty in the country by calling a general election.

"Do it or get off the pot," Levesque advised Trudeau, shortly after the premier and his nine colleagues learned of yet another federal plan to claim the country's basic constitutional law from Britain with the formula for changing it at home.

All 10, attending the 19th annual meeting of provincial leaders, denounced the proposal which would give the federal government the right to hold national plebiscites on constitutional questions failing provincial agreement on reform.

Levesque said the move appeared to be yet another effort by Trudeau to add to pre-election suspense. The time had come to clear the air.

Lougheed urged Trudeau to call a fall election for other reasons, saying a general vote is the only way to arrest current economic uncertainty in the country.

In a related development, Conservative leader Joe Clark said Wednesday the appointment of Otto Lang as justice minister indicates there will be a fall election.

In a speech in Kitchener, Ont., Clark said Trudeau would have made more extensive cabinet changes, if he intended to wait until spring to call an election.

GARBAGE MOUNTAIN

It's hardly a new tourist attraction but people were taking pictures of it there on the Causeway near the statue of Capt. Cook.

It looked remarkably like a pile of garbage.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life," Empress manager Ted Balderson said today.

"The garbage was in green bags and it was piled so high it was a mountain."

Balderson has already protested to city council on behalf of both the Empress and the Visitors Information Centre about what he calls an inadequate clean-up service.

Protests have also come from the Victoria Attractions Association, the Downtown Victoria Association, Victoria Chamber of Commerce and various Causeway merchants.

Balderson said litter is a daily problem on the Causeway, due in part to the many hawkers selling popcorn, ice cream and sausages there. But it reached a peak on the holiday weekend.

"Monday night was the worst I've seen it. I don't know where all the garbage bags came from but I noticed it overflowing the containers by 6 p.m. and by 8:30 there was a real mountain.

"People who have been to Victoria before ask us what has happened to the city," one tourist counsellor said.

"They have always thought of Victoria as a clean city but now it is dirty and messy in the Causeway area. People coming in on boats have also complained to us. The first thing they notice is the litter in the Welcome to Victoria flowerbed."

Dollar Firmer, Gold Price Slips

LONDON (AP) — The value of the U.S. dollar firmed up slightly against European currencies today and dipped slightly against the Japanese yen as gold prices dropped back from record highs.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 187.25 yen, down slightly from Wednesday's close of 187.60 yen. Trading was moderate with volume estimated at $412 million, down about $100 million from recent levels.

The five major gold traders in London set the mid-morning price of the metal at $205.85, down from Wednesday's record closing high of $207.25. Wednesday morning's fixing price was a record high $208 in London.

One-Man Strike Pays Off Well

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A one-man strike, which for nearly three weeks shut down a metals plant employing 300 people, ended Wednesday when the lone Teamster member settled for more money than he originally sought.

But about 300 other workers represented by the United Steelworkers would not cross the picket line that sometimes included about a half-dozen other Teamsters, none of whom were Hussey employees.

McDonough went on strike when the company did not meet his demands for a 60-cent raise from his salary of $6.90 in a three-year contract. The company offered 10 cents.

Ogg said the new agreement calls for a 65-cent-an-hour increase, plus a cost-of-living adjustment of 19 cents.

STAND TAKEN

VIENNA (AP) — The Romanian Communist party said Tuesday it would not accept the position of being "on the side of one socialist country against another," an apparent reference to China and the Soviet Union. The party stand, published in a newspaper, came a day after Romanian party leader Nicolae Ceausescu returned from a meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and a week before a visit to Romania by Chinese leader Hua Kuo-feng.

Low Tar Cigs No Threat: Scientist

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. government scientist says a smoker can consume a pack a day of some new cigarettes on the market without apparent risk.

"We don't want to call them safe. We don't think there is such a thing. But some are so low (in tar and other toxic substances) as to cause no observable hazard," says Gio Batta Gori, head of the smoking and health program at the U.S. National Institutes of Health.

Gori and Cornelius Lynch of Enviro Control Inc. have identified what they call the tolerable levels of smoke for 27 cigarette brands with relatively low tar.

The levels are based on the maximum amount of tar, nicotine and four other toxic substances found in the smoke that an average smoker might consume befoxe his death rate rises above that of a non-smoker.

Tar, the total particulate matter found in cigarette smoke, is generally believed to be the chief cancer-causing agent, while nicotine is known to have short-term adverse effects and is suspected of causing addiction, peptic ulcers and other damage.

Gori and Lynch also compared the amounts of four other hazardous substances in cigarette smoke: carbon monoxide, hydrogen cyanide, nitrogen oxides

Gori said details of their findings are to be published soon in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Gori said studies have shown that people who smoked no more than two pre-1960 cigarettes a day, when tar and nicotine contents were much higher, had no higher death rate than non-smokers.

Therefore, if one could reduce the various toxic substances in cigarettes below the pre-1960 levels, a smoker presumably could smoke more of the new, low-hazard cigarettes without increasing the risk of dying from lung cancer, heart disease or the various other ailments associated with cigarette smoking.

Gori conceded that because it takes many years for most smoking-related diseases to show up it will be some time before there is specific scientific evidence to prove or disprove his assumptions.

Meanwhile, some recent studies question the value of low tar and nicotine cigarettes, either because people tend to hold the smoke in their lungs longer or because new additives in the tobacco and paper may prove hazardous.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, said Gori's statements were "outrageous and irresponsible" because the findings don't take into account the unknown effects of flavor additives and other substances added to cigarettes in recent years.

"The industry won't even say what it's putting in cigarettes now, and even if these additives are safe unburned, God knows what they do and what compounds result from the combustion," he said.

Dr. Arthur Upton, director of the National Cancer Institute, issued this statement: "There is evidence, as Dr. Gori points out, that low tar and low nicotine cigarettes may be less hazardous than other brands. But our present knowledge does not permit us to establish tar, nicotine or carbon monoxide levels below which smoking would be safe."

Thousands Mourn Pope Amid Sobs and a Circus

Papal Bier viewed by thousands in St. Peter's Basilica

Thousands upon thousands of faithful, many sobbing, passed before the body of Pope Paul VI today as it lay in state in the awesome majesty of Rome's St. Peter's Basilica.

The Vatican announced that the Saturday funeral service for the pope will be held outdoors in St. Peter's Square instead of in St. Peter's basilica as originally planned because of the vast throngs — up to 250,000 — expected. The basilica holds 30,000 at most.

All cardinals present in Rome will concelebrate mass at the rite, which will be followed by burial in the Vatican grottoes below the basilica. The body will be placed in an 880-pound triple coffin of oak, lead and cypress before it is lowered to the grottoes.

During the night the body of Giovanni Battista Montini, who reigned for 15 years as Paul VI, was removed from its plain pine casket and placed on a bier in front of the central altar of the confessional, dwarfed by the towering Bernini bronze canopy with its twisted columns.

The basilica's doors were opened at 7 a.m. An estimated 40,000 people were waiting outside with thousands more arriving all the time.

St. Peter's, the largest church in Christendom, was to have been opened at 9 a.m. but the size of the waiting crowd, which gathered soon after dawn led church officials to advance this by two hours.

The thousands of mourners moved into the church at a fairly rapid speed past the Swiss guards standing before the massive bronze doors in their medieval uniforms of blue, red and gold. But they soon packed solid in the center nave and it took 45 minutes to move down to the bier.

Two electric fans played on Paul's body. There was a brownish yellow tinge to the skin.

People sobbed as the body came into view and ushers in front of the bier had difficulty in keeping the line moving as elderly people, tears streaming down their faces, fell to their knees in prayer.

For the first two hours there was a solemn religious atmosphere in the cathedral.

This changed as the morning went on with the arrival of tour groups, their leaders waving numbered flags and gaily-dressed tourists disregarding the ban on taking photographs.

At one moment, a priest among the first mourners noted the pain of those around him in the centre nave. He offered to say the rosary. Dozens of voices implored him to do so.

"We will do it in Latin for the benefit of all the foreigners around us," the priest said.

As the crowd moved slowly down the nave hundreds of voices echoed the rosary responses.

The body was brought to St. Peter's Wednesday evening.

Police chased off the hundreds of ice cream and soft drinks tradesmen and peddlers of "genuine gold" coins and watches who normally plague St. Peter's square.

Permitted were the elderly women who besides selling their usual rosaries also offered Pope Paul VI medals.

ODDS-ON PICK FOR POPE ONCE VATICAN REP HERE

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Cardinal Sergio Pignedoli, the former apostolic delegate in Canada, who is quoted by bookmakers in London as the favorite to succeed Pope Paul VI, has always been prepared to talk about anything except his chances of becoming pope.

Unlike most of his peers, who are cautious and often secretive, Cardinal Pignedoli, 68, is an outward-going man ready to meet anyone who calls on him.

He receives total strangers with outstretched arms. "Why should I keep people away?" he asks.

Youthful looking, despite his closely shorn white hair, he often answers his own telephone, something other cardinals rarely do.

However, his openness led him into what some people consider to have been an error serious enough to cast doubt on his intellectual depth.

As president of the Vatican's department for relations with non-Christians, he attended a meeting in Tripoli in 1976 with Islamic leaders which ended with a final document condemning Zionism — a position beyond official Vatican policy.

The cardinal put out a clarification later stating that the Vatican alone could approve the final document. The Vatican never gave it's approval.

But Cardinal Pignedoli was never rebuked and he says the incident was blown out of all proportion and has long been forgotten.

Syrian Evacuation Sparks Shooting

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Shooting broke out today as 150 Syrian troops evacuated buildings encircled by right-wing militia forces in Beirut's Christian district of Ashrafiyeh, militia sources reported.

Details of the shooting were confused but there were no immediate reports of casualties. Firing lasted about 20 minutes.

The sources said the shooting began as the Syrians were leaving the last of six buildings near Ashrafiyeh's main square.

Rightist sources said the evacuation was part of an agreement with the 30,000-strong Syrian-dominated Arab League peacekeeping force to defuse tension in the area, the scene of some fierce battles in the last few weeks.

Observers said the agreement failed to touch the root of the conflict.

"This is just a break, a breather," said a steel-helmeted militiaman near Ahsrafiyeh's main square, which was lined with burned-out cars and littered with debris from the latest round of Syrian-rightist fighting last weekend.

The right-wing Falangist Radio, which on Wednesday announced the agreement, said rightist commanders had ordered their units not to move about in uniform or carry arms in public in Ashrafiyeh.

But a newsman who toured the battered district said there was no sign that the militias had immediate plans to don civilian clothes and lay down their arms.

Former president Camille Chamoun said he viewed today's evacuation as a first step towards the withdrawal of Syrian troops from Lebanon—the chief demand of the major right-wing organizations.

CHRISTINA'S NOW OFF TO ENGLAND

ATHENS (Reuter) — Greek shipping heiress Christina Onassis today flew to England in her private jet, an Athens Airport official said.

Miss Onassis, 27, was accompanied by three friends, the official said.

Miss Onassis called off a honeymoon in Siberia with her third husband, former shipping official Sergei Kauzov, and flew home to Greece last Saturday, accompanied by a Greek Embassy official.

Greek newspapers have reported that the shipping heiress had already decided to divorce him. And friends acknowledged that she was under strong family pressure to give up the man who has been labelled a Russian KGB intelligence agent by one Athens paper.

However, in Moscow Wednesday, Kauzov dismissed reports that Christina had abandoned him and insisted she would return to him in the near future.

He added that she had kept in touch with him since going to Greece and said he took no notice of what the papers were saying about them.

What Tax Revolt?

Observers of the B.C. political scene are predicting that Premier Bill Bennett has already uttered the words that will become Social Credit's slogan in the next election campaign: "The tax revolt started here."

Asked about the rising mood of public antipathy towards ever-higher taxes and government spending, Bennett said he believes it will become clear to the people that the tax revolt in B.C. started with his Social Credit government in 1975.

All we can say is: he has to be joking.

Perhaps a few things should be made clear to the premier: the tax revolt is just that, a revolt against taxes, especially against property taxes. It is not in itself a revolt against more civil servants, more social programs, or even against government waste, although most proponents of the tax revolt believe in some vague connections between those things and high taxes.

It is certainly not a revolt against deficit financing; few of those complaining about their high taxes are sophisticated enough in economics to recognize that deficit financing means higher taxes later on. Most would probably not say a word about deficit financing if it meant that their taxes went down now.

It is therefore nonsensical for Bennett to suggest that his government began any sort of a tax revolt. He might argue with some justification that it started a revolt against excessive government spending, that it started a move back to balanced budgets that in the long run will mean lower taxes, that it started the current fad of uttering rhetoric about us all living within our means.

But it started nothing like a tax revolt — meaning an actual cut in taxes. Indeed, since the Socreds returned to power, taxes have been significantly increased, and continue to be significantly increased.

Soon after the Socreds took power in 1975, they increased the sales tax from five per cent to seven per cent, they doubled the ferry rates, they tripled the car insurance rates for many drivers, they increased both personal and corporate income taxes by two points. It was estimated at that time that the new taxes and tax increases had lessened the purchasing power of the average family by about $100 per month.

Since then the sales tax has come down again, mainly because of an incentive grant from Ottawa to make up the difference for a six-month period, and the ferry rates came down a smidgen after loud roars that the dramatic increases were ruining the economy of Vancouver Island. The income tax rates and the car insurance rates have stayed up.

In the intervening years, the only tax that has been removed has been the succession duty and gift tax, hardly a change that benefits the average British Columbian.

Other taxes and pseudo-taxes have continued to rise. B.C. Hydro, for example, a Crown corporation in a monopoly position in most of the province, has regularly raised rates for electricity, natural gas and transit.

In recent years, the government has moved towards increasing the property tax, the specific levy that most infuriates the proponents of a tax revolt. Through changes in the assessment formula and in the hopelessly complicated school financing formula, the government has dumped an ever-larger share of school taxes on the property owner. Now it has passed a law that will require local governments to pick up a large share of the transit deficit, a move that seems likely to mean an increase in the property tax sooner or later as well as an unpleasant immediate increase of three cents on the gasoline tax.

If, with such a record behind him, Bennett has the gall to suggest that he started a tax revolt, he should not be at all surprised if the voters of B.C. start another revolt at the time of the next election — this one against his Social Credit government.

Tell Us Why

Using 911 as a universal fire-police-emergency telephone number may or may not be a good idea, but one thing is certain: local municipal officials who will decide have not been well-served by the skimpy report on the subject from Victoria fire chief Eric Simmons.

Simmons' letter to the intermunicipal committee on behalf of fire and police chiefs throughout the Victoria region says simply they held a meeting and decided there was no demonstrable need at the present for 911. Why? "A great deal of discussion took place on the pros and cons of 911," the letter says.

That's hardly enough information to make an important, expensive decision. On the face of it, changing to 911 appears to make sense. But local councils need more information, especially the reasons local fire and police are opposed, before they can decide one way or another. Tell us why, chief.

"... furthermore, I want all sharp objects and anything that could be used as a projectile removed from the conference room ..."

PETER HADEKEL

Taxes: Problem for Quebec

MONTREAL—If you can believe businessmen here, the biggest problem facing head offices in this province is not language or the threat of separation but the high provincial tax rates on executives.

Companies with head offices in Montreal say they can live with the recently-released language regulations governing their operations.

Under Bill 101 rules, companies with half their business or more outside Quebec may use English on the job subject to a written agreement with the government's French Language Office.

Most Taxed Executives

But what businessmen have been complaining about ever since Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau's spring budget is the ever-increasing gap between taxes in Quebec and Ontario.

Parizeau's budget increased the tax rate on married persons earning over $30,000 and on single persons making more than $22,000.

The changes make Quebec executives the most taxed in Canada.

Businessmen have been warning the Parti Quebecois government that the high tax rates will make it difficult to attract and retain management personnel in Quebec.

"People are already nervous about coming to Quebec because of the political situation. The taxes here make it even more difficult to attract competent personnel," a senior executive observed recently.

By all accounts, the mood in Montreal's head offices this summer has been bad. Several executives interviewed recently predict that the tax changes wil backfire on the government by driving ambitious French Quebecers out of the province.

Consolidated Bathurst president William Turner has said the tax changes pose a greater problem than Bill 101. He told shareholders it will cost the company between $3 million and $4 million to bridge the gap between the take-home pay of executives in Quebec and Ontario.

In the past, people have put up with high taxes here because Montreal's unique atmosphere and lifestyle were worth the sacrifice. Now executives feel that the tax discrepancy outweighs the advantages of living in Montreal.

A Quebec resident earning $33,600 now earns roughly the same take-home pay as an Ontario resident earning $31,300. A $60,000 salary-earner in Quebec pays about $5,000 more in taxes than he would in Ontario.

An executive earning $100,000 will take home $48,000 here, compared to $55,000 in Ontario and $57,000 in Alberta.

Parizeau believes the business community is simply griping about having to open their fat wallets a little wider. But businessmen are trying to get a different message across. They view themselves as something more than just 10 per cent of the tax rolls. In many cases, they are the province's economic decision-makers, on whom thousands of other jobs depend.

"These are the people the province needs," one business leader said. "Discouraging them by increasing their taxes will not help Quebec."

Fear of Socialism

The tax issue underlines the real conflict between the government and the business community. "The socialism of the government is our biggest fear," says the president of a large Quebec engineering firm.

The business community believes Parizeau's Robin Hood act of robbing the rich to pay the poor is only a symptom of the government's prejudice against free enterprise. For its part, the government has been suspicious of businessmen for opposing some of its social and cultural programs.

So far, the only concession Parizeau has made on the tax issue is to increase the dividend tax credit in Quebec, allowing Quebecers to retain more of their income earned through corporate dividends.

Lotteries Are Good for You!

By IONA CAMPAGNOLO

Fitness and Sports Minister

During the past few weeks there has been considerable coverage given to the disagreement between federal and provincial governments concerning the introduction of a new lottery game by Loto Canada and, more generally, the distribution of Loto Canada revenues.

Unfortunately, some of the statements have been quite inaccurate and have created unnecessary apprehensions on the part of many British Columbians. I would like to clarify this situation for your readers.

Lotteries in Canada were not legal until 1969. At that time, legislation passed by the federal government allowed the operation of both a national lottery (which has become Loto Canada) and smaller lotteries operating under the jurisdiction of provincial governments. There is no question that from the start both levels of government have been involved in the lottery field.

As you may recall, Loto Canada was initially introduced to allow Canadians — on a voluntary basis — to assist in the financing of both the 1976 Olympic Games and the 1978 Commonwealth Games. Revenues from Loto Canada sales have been distributed on the basis of the following formula — a formula which was adopted with the consent of all 10 provinces:

☐ 82.5 per cent of net revenues towards the cost of the 1976 Olympics and the 1978 Commonwealth Games.

☐ 12.5 per cent of net revenues to the provincial governments. This is distributed in the same proportion as the number of tickets sold in each province.

☐ Five per cent of net revenues to the fitness and amateur sport branch of the government of Canada to assist in financing sport and recreation development programs.

Approximately $2 million of Loto Canada funds have gone to finance fitness and amateur sport's Game Plan and information service. Game Plan has been a key factor in raising Canada's world position in international competitions. Through Game Plan, Canadian athletes have been sent to over 200 international events since December, 1976. While travelling, Canadian athletes receive transportation, accommodation, coaching and medical assistance through Loto Canada funding.

Lottery funds thus make it possible for many young Canadian athletes to develop their talents. Without financial support, few athletes could afford to properly train or participate in international competitions. Loto Canada allows this badly needed support to come from voluntary contributions.

The formula makes it clear, though, that the revenues from Loto Canada are used for the benefit of all Canadians — both through our federal government to assist with athlete development and the construction of facilities for international events, and through the funds forwarded to each provincial government.

Since its inception, Loto Canada has forwarded to the province of British Columbia over $1,119,000 for use as the provincial government sees fit.

This funding formula expires at the end of 1979, when the federal government's commitments to the Olympic and Commonwealth Games will have been fulfilled. There has been some confusion over reports that Loto Canada itself was to have ceased operation at the end of 1979. This is not the case, and I want to assure you that it has never been the intention of the federal government to have Loto Canada cease operation at the end of 1979.

The question of a new Loto Canada revenue-sharing formula is one which was raised at the recent federal-provincial lotteries conference, and is one which I hope to resolve in discussions with my provincial counterparts during the coming months. At the present time there is not an agreement on the subject, and I think it is safe to say that this disagreement is at the root of at least part of the current controversy.

I want to emphasize that, following the termination of the existing revenue-sharing formula, it is not the intention of the federal government to retain all revenue from Loto Canada's $10 and $1 games. In fact, during the federal-provincial ministers meeting, I placed before the provinces a proposed formula to share (after 1979) the net revenues of both the current $10 game and the new $1 game. It is my strong conviction that the British Columbians will gain — not lose — from the new Loto Canada activities.

Turning specifically to the new $1 ticket computerized lottery, I want to make it very clear that this is not a "slot machine" or "instant jackpot" type of game. The new Loto game will allow players to choose a series of six numbers between one and 49. If three, four, five, or all of the player's numbers match any of the six numbers subsequently selected in the weekly draw, the player wins a set prize. In addition, a seventh, complementary number is drawn and a special prize is awarded to players who have selected, in any order, five correct numbers and whose sixth number matches the complementary number. When the system is fully operational an estimated 250,000 prizes will be awarded each month.

The game will be played through computer terminals located at selected Loto Canada outlets across the country. These terminals will simply provide receipts verifying the player's selection. There is no type of instant money jackpot whatsoever involved in this concept.

It is our expectation that the new game will provide the Canadian public with an additional and different means of participating in lotteries. Rather than being intended to supplant existing provincial lotteries, we believe that it will complement these games.

I recognize fully the concern expressed that this game — because it is operated on a computer terminal basis and does not require "salesmen" — will reduce the amount of commission revenue available to volunteer organizations and service clubs which sell tickets for the Western and Provincial lotteries. Loto Canada market surveys, however, do not indicate that the new $1 ticket Loto game will have a major impact on the sales of these lotteries.

In addition, Loto Canada fully recognizes the valuable community role played by these organizations and is currently finalizing plans which will allow service and volunteer organizations to benefit financially from the success of the new game. I am assured by Guy Cousineau, president of Loto Canada, that these plans will be made public very shortly.

You may have been informed that the federal government had requested provinces to withdraw from the Western Express and the Provincial games in order to participate in the new Loto Canada game. This is not the case.

In closing, I want to assure you again that I share the widespread appreciation for the invaluable role played in our society by volunteer organizations. In my capacity as minister of state for fitness and amateur sport, I come into daily contact and frequently provide support for these organizations and I know that much of our country's amateur sport activity would not exist without their efforts. Loto Canada has no intention of depriving these groups of lottery commission revenues or, as has been alleged, of forcing other lotteries out of business.

I regret the confusion and misunderstanding that has arisen on this important issue and, once the matter can be put into better perspective, I look forward to working closely with my provincial counterparts in the months ahead on the basis of a mutually agreeable revenue-sharing formula.

Be Nice Now

Now that Grace McCarthy's Smile campaign has proved such a success, let's go one further and have a "say something nice" campaign. People serving the public must get awfully tired of reading letters and hearing remarks about how bad their operations are, particularly the ferry people. No one has a good word to say about the ferry food — and yet every sailing has a cafeteria line up. Since it is impossible to starve to death between Victoria and Vancouver, why would people eat on the ferry if the food wasn't good?

The same with the bus drivers, health service, ferry personel etc. For every one who is a bit surly I can count ten who are pleasant and go out of their way to give good service. I say thanks to all those people, and let's start saying something nice about all the good things and pleasant people in our beautiful British Columbia. — Vivienne Clarke, 555 Riel Place.

It's Not News

All the media talk and write a great deal about the beer strike, beer supplies, beer gardens and so on. Don't they have any other interesting topics to bring to the attention of listeners, readers and viewers? Apparently not.

As for outdoor premises to be granted licences to serve alcoholic beverages, the matter should not be dealt with by a municipal council, but should be decided by the people by means of what in the U.S. is called an "initiative" requiring a certain number of signatures in favor or against. Similarly, permits to sell all sorts of items along the Inner Harbor should be submitted to a popular vote.

It is about time that we all wake up from our lethargic state of mind. Otherwise, now and in the future, we shall always have what we "deserve." Please do stand up and be counted: show that we care. — E. J. Lattes, 432 - 200 Dallas Road.

Legion the Loser

In the beer strike, may I please point out that we owe thanks to the U.S. for helping out? We should not forget that fact and boycott Labatt's etc. when they decide to look into matters. To me they have had ample time for such.

But this letter is not political, but just to ask the people that run this province why have the Canadian Legion not had their share of imports? We are members and God knows we deserve our share of what's going. But all the pubs around our branch have beer at $1.35 a can, where in the Legion we only would have to pay $1.15, but no beer the last two weeks.

They Smiled

To those who disagree with the Grace McCarthy smile campaign:

I have recently returned from a holiday in Europe.

The only place I would like to return are Italy and England. Why? They were the only places where people smiled. Holland, France and Germany were all unsmiling. People in stores seemed even worse than the clerks here.

If the tourist dollar is as important as statistics show, some of our indiffernt clerks should learn that their jobs may depend on their smiles and courtesy to visitors and Victorians alike. — C. Vickery, Victoria.

Rural Serenity

There is a parcel of land in Sidney/North Saanich bounded by Frost Avenue, McTavish Road, Canora Road and the Patricia Bay Highway. It is a parcel of field and forest, a place where quiet animals hide — deer, mice, rabbits — and birds abound. An old barn stands dejected, but breathing history; its boards creak and sway with the west wind, and swallows glide between them, up to their nests in the former loft.

Yet this land's simple beauty has been ignored: it will die as other of the peninsula's open spaces have died for it has been slated for development.

Its rural serenity will wither as mobile homes are built; trailers (or houses) whose glaring aluminum exudes the essence of the foul disease, urban sprawl.

If reservation has been deemed impossible, then at least, conservation should be practised: it requires only development foresight.

The peaceful quality can be maintained if structures that blend, rather than sting the landscape are built. These could be of wood and in clusters in order to leave a good deal of open land around them (land for garden plots and walkways, for example). The trees could be left standing; the culvert removed from the stream, and perhaps a wooden plank bridge built. (In spring the stream is a nesting site for mallards, and at the sea it becomes a haven for waterfowl, salmon and trout.) But now, because of the culvert, it is stagnant with algae and nettles abound. Some extra cost will arise in the building of a "blending" community with open space, but perhaps the builder can be government-subsidized, for the benefits are innumerable and invaluable:

☐ The rural beauty and the environment quality would be maintained.

☐ It will be low-cost housing.

☐ The residents will have a home needing little upkeep, comparable to the home that was retired from, not an institution, nor a development that can be labelled at a glance as low cost housing.

☐ An unobtrusive design that enhances or blends with the wooded landscape and the fields and leaves some space open rather than destroying these qualities and creating an asphalt shroud, would show the foresight of the builder.

The benefits to him would have a price: he would be given more opportunity to build. A development that is an ugly slash, another handful of salt in the peninsula's seeping wound will make him, if justice is done, an outlawed and marked man.

The municipality must have foresight too, and be judicious in approving plans: it is in the local government's hands to conserve the peninsula's rural identity and natural beauty for tomorrow. — Lee-Ellen Benson, 2300 Adela Place, Sidney.

Showdown In a Steamy Shangri-la

By GAVIN YOUNG
London Observer

BAGUIO CITY, The Philippines — At five o'clock sharp, Viktor Korchnoi and Anatoly Karpov enter from the wings, right and left. You almost expect them to prance downstage and, grinning, swing into a soft-shoe shuffle to an invisible orchestra.

But no. Their approach to the floodlit table with the black and white pieces set out all ready under the huge 'silence' notice is sedate. Korchnoi taller, slightly bowed, balding, like a friendly bear. Young Karpov, a wisp of a man, brown hair falling boyishly over one eyebrow, slightly flatfooted. They pay no attention to the audience, a carefully measured 41 feet away, or to each other. They shake hands (touch hands, really) with a blind, abstracted air. It is not dislike, Korchnoi told me. It is simply that, to each of them, the other simply might not be there, in that concentrated moment, when they are enduring an exactly-timed three minutes of photographs.

The audience whispers. The cameramen are banished. The frail [illegible] the light blue suit (Karpov) tests his white chair, rests his elbows on the table, locks his hands over his mouth like a squirrel munching an acorn, bends his flared trouser-legs under him and crosses one brown shoe over the other, pale eyes fixed on the board.

Korchnoi, in his special, $15,000 green chair, unhurriedly leans forward, adjusting between finger and thumb dark glasses which have mirror surfaces to block Karpov's unnerving stare.

Silence. Then eight minutes of moves — almost a flurry. It subsides, and Korchnoi gets up and strolls away, hands in coat pockets, to an armchair on the edge of the stage. There he sits down, crosses his legs, and calmly watches Filipinos struggling to mark up the moves on two huge boards on each side of the stage.

Through binoculars, I see Karpov's smooth cheeks twitching slightly, his lips very slightly pursing and unpursing, as he ponders Korchnoi's move. He ponders it for 20 minutes. He may ponder if for 20 more. People leave for a drink.

There's no hurry. This tournament is bound to go on for three months, maybe much longer. Chess, we all know, is slow, like elephants making love. But here the slowness suddenly astounds you. Every other evening, perhaps until Christmas, these two men will enter this half-empty 1,000-seat hall, and play chess from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m., until one of them has won six games.

Baguio (the 'A' is long as in Yorkshire: 'Ee bah goom') is a five-hour drive from Manila, almost 5,000 feet above the sea in northern Luzon. I drove up jungle canyons full of waterfalls with taxi-driver Rommy (Boy) Perez at the wheel of his 'Easy Rider' taxi.

It is Baguio's rainy season. It will rain every day until October. Sometimes the little town is blanketed in dense fog. The small friendly Malay-like Baguio people say "Have a nice day" in American accents. They carry umbrellas. Middle-aged men, with the features of bronzed Somerset Maughams, sip San Miguel beer ('Cerveza Negra — Packs Vigor') in bars, wearing sweaters like Welsh miners in November.

Korchnoi is at the Pines Hotel. It has a vaguely Bavarian look and a blazing wood fire in the hall. He can be seen any day (genially chatting) in the cafeteria. Karpov and his henchmen, including two Soviet Grandmasters, a taciturn manager (ex-KGB) called Viktor Baturinsky, an interpreter and a cook, live in a tower of the very modern, neo-Babylonian Terraces Plaza Hotel, isolated from the world like the Prisoner of Zenda. Everyone feels very isolated here. In an ocean of pine-trees, Baguio is like a very damp Shangri-la.

Politics got into the act early. Korchnoi sat back at the opening ceremony under President Marcos' eye and hooted with glee when the Philippines Army band played the 'Internationale' instead of the Soviet national anthem. It more than made up for the Soviet refusal to let him use the flag of his recently adopted country, Switzerland.

Then came the great yogurt controversy. Karpov liked having yogurt — usually violet-colored — delivered to him during play. One of Korchnoi's seconds, British Grandmaster Raymond Keene, wrote a letter to Grandmaster Lothar Schmid, the West German arbiter of the match: "It is clear that a cunningly-arranged distribution of edible items to one player . . . could convey a tiny code message. A yogurt could mean "we instruct you to offer a draw." A dish of marinated quails' eggs could mean . . .

Surely a joke of sorts? But careful arbiter Schmid, a young 50, neutral as a pat of butter, said to me, "Well, you know, there could be a code in a split banana. But no one suspected Fischer's sour fish in 1972."

'Like Kismet'

Mrs. Petra Leeuwerick, Korchnoi's constant and voluble companion, is his formidable political tricks master as well. The sinister Baturinsky is Karpov's. No wonder she loathes Baturinsky. Originally Austrian (now Dutch), she was seized by the Russians in the Soviet Zone of Vienna after the war and given 20 years as a spy in the infamous Vorkuta labor camp. She served nine years there, leading occasional revolts. She is beautiful, 49, and very tough.

She met Korchnoi three months after his defection in 1976. "Our meeting was Kismet," she says. "The Soviets want to kill him in a mental way."

"You say they are using microwaves?"

"Who knows? From the Soviets I expect many things — all bad! Baturinsky? He was a military prosecutor in the Stalin era. Just like the man who gave me 20 years!"

Further talk of Kismet from Michael Stean, another British Grandmaster and Korchnoi second, slightly built, quietly affable, who overlapped at Trinity, Cambridge, in 1971 with the heavyweight, ebullient, Raymond Keene. Keene had met Korchnoi in Havana in 1972 and again in Geneva after his defection. Korchnoi likes having supporters around — unlike Bobby Fischer, the genius who distrusts everyone — so he recruited Keene, and Keene recruited his friend Stean.

For Stean "it was an act of fate." It has, he says, improved his chess enormously. After every game, Keene and Stean go into a huddle with Korchnoi, trying to analyse Karpov's state of mind from his moves.

I ask Stean about chess. "Chess," he says, "is a talent for pattern recognition. Compare it with music or maths. Or code-breaking. Memory? Fischer's chess memory is fantastic."

Another chess champion here told me, "I can memorize pages of poems and so on." I asked how long, then, would it take him to memorize say, "Pippa Passes," or a Shakespeare sonnet? Half an hour? "About that."

"This?" I held up the 'Pines' cafeteria menu: potage, karekare (braised ox-knuckles with eggplants, banana blossoms and beans), coffee or tea — seven lines of print.

"No, no," he said quickly, "You see, I'm not interested in that."

Stean said "I can't remember verse. I even forget my key in my room." He can remember telephone numbers.

Most people, Keene says, are at their chess peak at about 30 — his own age as it happens. Korchnoi, 47 last month, is, statistically speaking, over the hill. "But Vikotr is an exception to all the rules."

Under the Baguio convention hall, when the play in on, the players' seconds, security men and journalists wander about between a restaurant, a telex room and two bars. Tangle-haired Grandmasters fling pieces about chess boards in a haze of smoke, trying to work out what the two Titans on the stage overhead are up to.

We watch in sweaty heat despite air conditioning. A German Grandmaster is booming "How to liberate Karpov's position, which is passive?" It sounds a tricky question.

"Viktor", Stean is explaining to journalists over pineapple juice, "has always played Open Defence to the Ruy Lopez. Karpov has played one Queen's Gambit Declined and one Nimzo-Indian." An American gasps: "Wild!"

As the five hours drag on, I tell myself to remember never to ask anyone "Who's winning?" The reply would be almost as devastating as a flamethrower.

At one point, I am slammed amicably into a chair by the excitable Filipino organizer of this million-dollar wingding, Florencio Campomanes, and simultaneously bear-hugged by joyful Soviet cosmonaut Vitaly Sevastyanov, a two-time Hero of the Soviet Union, two red ribbons with stars on his lapel, and a full tumbler of neat vodka in his powerful hand.

"Name? Young? Ha, you always young man." We drink several tumblers and he tells about flying through space in Soyuz and Salyut. "Come home," he bawls, handing me his address. "Star-Town, Moscow."

Baturinsky looks in, narrowing eyes behind thick glasses. When I leave, my notes are sodden with vodka, my cheek scratched by medals.

In the 'Pines' cafeteria, Yasha Murei, a young Russian in Korchnoi's party who recently left Russia for Israel, says to Campomanes, "Bed noos forr you." 'Bad news?' "You hef fetal kees." 'My kiss is fatal, ha!' No, no. Baturinsky he kees you lest night. Fetal. Maybe you die."

A small smile

Next night, a choral concert on the chess stage, by the Philippines Opera chorus, vigorously conducted by Tessie Agana-Santos, a handsome lady in ankle-length white. We hear an aria from a Filipino opera called "El Filibusterismo." Korchnoi cocks a quizzical eye. Karpov is absent in his tower. Baturinsky wears a small smile.

I decide to beard Batruinsky. A deep voice answers the telephone from room 424. "J'ai one meeting at onze heures," he says. The r's roll like balls in a skittle alley. "Mais possible for you at quatre heures, four hours?"

At four o'clock over coffee, we meet. Baturinsky is short, vastly tubby, baldish, wears specs. H looks to me like an old Hollywood comedy actor of the 1950s called 'Cuddles' Zakal. Through a smooth, blond interpreter in a blue blazer, he says: "This yogurt business, ridiculous. And they say, we held Korchnoi back to advance our pet Karpov. Quite untrue . . ." Baturinsky blows out thick smoke from a fat cigar.

Does Karpov — so thin — need special food? "Some. But that's in the confidence of our cook." Can I see the cook? Baturinsky smiles, puffing smoke. "No. Sorry. He's not around."

He adds: "You know, the Korchnoi people say I have no humor. But those who know me say I am a humorous man. My age? Well I was born in 1914, but that is not the reason the Great War began." He beams. "I like that," I say.

I say the Korchnoi people claim his team is in touch with Moscow to receive chess advice. "Yes." Smoke envelops me from both sides. "Through the cook. 007! Later, we may bring up space rockets."

I say I'd like to see Karpov. "I'll do my best." We shake hands. I say: "And the cook?" He turns to the interpreter, puzzled: "Engliski humor?" And he waddles away, trailing smoke.

I saw Anatoly Karpov (Tolya to his team) in the lobby at 10 paces. People say he weighs only 50 kilos. He certainly looks frail.

He has a romantic look. In fact he likes reading Lermontov, the Russian romantic. He has few friends. No girls. He is cautious, defensive at chess. (Korchnoi is the romantic, dare-devil counter-attacker). Soviet Grandmaster Mikhail Tal says, "He's a minor genius, trying to become a major genius."

"He's so cool," Michael Stean told me. "I played with him once in Spain in a disco, and the air-conditioning failed. Everyone sat there streaming. Karpov wasn't even sweating."

Lucky for Karpov, because chess is, physically, immensely taxing. Players can lose two or three pounds in a game. Hence Korchnoi's jogging and Karpov's tennis at the U.S. Army rest camp here.

Keeping up championship stamina plays havoc with daily routine. After matches Korchnoi stays up late analysing them with Stean and Keene. In the morning, he gets up at 11 o'clock. Before a match he sleeps for one hour.

His breakfast is porridge, laced with whisky or honey. Between games, Iranian caviare ("good for the brain"). He is volatile, brave ("I fear only the dentist"), and although he is a naturally heavy drinker and smoker, he gives up smoking and most drinking for the two-to three-month match. He likes Tolstoy, Solzhenitsyn, Sherlock Holmes, people and cats.

I talked to him in the cafeteria about bribery in the chess world. Ray Keene had told me of a bribe offer from a Romanian in Reykjavik in 1972. "Let me explain you," Korchnoi said, relaxed in an open-necked shirt. "In Soviet Union bribes are not always in money — but something more precious. Travel, for instance. Only sportsmen can travel. I know a Yugoslav player who gave a point to a Soviet Grandmaster for $400. And a Romanian Grandmaster who lost to a Brazilian for $1,000.

Later, I heard harsh words, too, for the Soviet-dominated World Chess Federation (FIDE). I had imagined it to be an upright institution. But no. "About as full of politics as the U.N.," according to more than one international chess master.

Bribes or no bribes — and a top master winning a major tournament will get only about what a first round loser at Wimbledon gets — 'jet-set chess' is a game for the utterly dedicated.

Chess is as mind-boggling as studying the universe. There are, I am told, 10^{79} atoms in the universe. The number of possible chess games is reckoned to be 10^{120}.

There is no end to chess. Stean compares it to an ever-expanding balloon. "The surface — our knowledge — gets bigger all the time."

I think of Humpty Dumpty in Lewis Carroll's Alice Through the Looking Glass — "I can explain all the poems that ever were invented — and a good many that haven't been invented yet." But Michael Stean hasn't read Alice, as I discovered when I thrust the chess 'problem' at the beginning of it under his nose, momentarily flummoxing him.

There are 12 Grandmasters here. Between games, one can hear these Einsteins of chess playing without boards over cream-cakes at the 'Pines.' And the noise of genius at play is considerable.

"Listen, what about this: P—QB4, N—KB3, P—Q4—Hey, I ordered milk." "Vot is he showink you?" "Just a minute. Moment. P—K3, N—QB3, B—N5, how's that." "Kindly speak Spanish so I can understand." "Wait, Ja?, P—K3, P—B4 . . . that seems to work." "Vy you not trying N—K2?" "Oh, what's the Russian for "forget it?" The names echo out cheerfully: "Yuri . . . Yasha . . . Dragan . . . Max . . . Eugene . . . Miguel . . . Bob . . ."

Learn patience

Viktor Korchnoi has written a book, Chess is My Life. It is his life. He has been a Grandmaster for 24 years. He defected in 1976 for chess reasons, not political ones. ("His chess in the USSR was being throttled for the sake of bringing on Karpov, says Stean.) But now he has become, unwittingly, a (non-active) political dissident, although he has had no contact with people like Solzhenitsyn. His wife and son, Igor, blocked in the Soviet Union, are the cause.

In the 'Pines' cafeteria someone says: "Viktor, the weather here is bad until October. So, 30 games of bad weather. Then 70 games of sun, no?" Petra Leeuwerick says: "Viktor likes bad weather." Korchnoi, in a Sussex University T-shirt, roared with laughter: "Yes, yes."

"What patience you must have," I said. Petra grinned darkly. "If you go to the Soviet Union for 10 years, you'll learn patience, too."

Marching to the Right

By JAMES CAMERON
Manchester Guardian

Sir David McNee, the metropolitan London chief police commissioner, is rightly the spokesman and champion of his force. He says in his first annual report that the cops are not getting a square deal.

He claims that their job is being made unnecessarily difficult by "certain restraints of criminal procedure." He blames "well-meaning people" and "libertarians" for making it easier for the crooks and harder for the policemen. By this he means that too many villains are being granted bail, by soft-hearted or pusillanimous magistrates. Too many people aren't in who ought to be.

"Of 230 people arrested for major crimes by the robbery squad (during 1976-77) 52 were on bail." This is very bad news. I wholly sympathize with Sir David McNee, and those who serve under him. It must be seriously galling to get someone in the nick only to see him released through some pettifogging rule-of-thumb by the bench. Or as Sir David puts it: "The unstinted and over-charitable granting of bail to ruthless armed robbers."

From the policeman's point of view there is much to be said for this argument. The criminal classes are not to be trusted, other than under lock and key, and rarely then.

It occurs to me, however, that the fact that a ruthless armed robber can be granted bail must logically mean that he has not yet been convicted of that particular ruthless armed robbery with which he is charged, and cannot therefore be called a ruthless armed robber until he is legally convicted of the ruthless armed robbery in question.

Doubtless every ruthless armed robber remains so for ever, and I have acquaintances who would prove that point, but there is this quibbling point that even if he has a dozen convictions he is still technically innocent of this particular ruthless robbery until he is found guilty, however proper the presumptions of the police and however familiar they are with his form.

This is one of the absolutes of our doubtless barmy social institutions, whatever you or I or Sir David may say. It is one of the risks we take, to avoid the greater hazards of the KGB. I trust the British police.

An evening or so ago we found ourselves in a delightful and friendly social occasion, and we found ourselves dining with a policeman, a very well informed man. I will not say what was his rank, his division, or even town, because I would not wish to prejudice the day when he gets his comeuppance, as he surely will.

He was a personally agreeable and cultivated chap, with a sensitive appreciation of good things, and his demeanor impeccable. And I will bet a quid to a penny he is part of the National Front.

In the course of a leisured conversation he said that anyone who spoke of rational tolerance for cannabis was talking Left-Wing Crap, that all socialists are on grass or vice versa, that the only society that made sense of Law and Order was the South African society, and that their regime should not be challenged but encouraged. If he had his way, he said thoughtfully . . . He was in conversation with an Asian lady at the time, but no matter.

Proceeding in an easterly direction, that is to say to the right, he offered the opinion that it might have been no bad thing if the German Nazis had won the last war, they at least knew what they were doing; they understood discipline. So said he, who was too young ever to have met a Nazi, unless perhaps among his own acquaintances.

It was a rather chilling performance, but not unrevealing. I repeat that he was a respected police officer, educated in the esthetics, in good standing with his colleagues, with many years to go. And he argued, with quite confident and wholly sober civility, that it might not have been a bad thing to have been occupied by Hitler, that one must stand behind Dr. Vorster, and that anyone to the left of Enoch Powell was almost certainly on pot.

But of course he was the exception that proves the rule. I hope.

BONDS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday. The short end of the market rose five cents. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues gained one-eighth of a point. Corporate issues remained the same. Day-to-day money was available at 8⅞ per cent.

HAROLD BARBER

There are a lot of listings on the market today. Fortunately I have only 3 left. If you are thinking of selling or buying, please talk to me. I hope I will be able to help.

One little gem I have left is an older home in excellent condition in the Glanford area. Priced at $46,500, it is well worth while to look at, especially if you have children. It has 3 bedrooms, full basement, on quiet street but only moments away from all schools, bus line and stores. An easy walk for anyone.

Call me anytime. for information.

Cheque Plan Expanding

CHICAGO (AP) — The president and chief executive officer of the newly formed Master Charge Traveller's Cheque Corp. says 14 banks in the U.S. and three abroad have applied to be charter members in the new traveller's cheque program.

John Reynolds, who is also president of the Interbank Card Association, said Interbank has licensed MCTC to use the Master Charge service marks on its traveller's cheques.

Reynolds said the MCTC program would have much tighter central control than the recently announced traveller's cheque program proposed by the rival Visa credit system.

The not-for-profit MCTC program, Reynolds said, is built around an administrative, central processing and distribution network handling issuance, security, cheque clearance and national marketing.

"So far as we've been able to determine," he said, "Visa . . . has opted for more or less loosely controlled, decentralized issuance and processing."

Reynolds said the Visa traveller's cheque announcement sounded to him as little better than a "me-too" effort.

Reynolds also predicted success for MCTC in its current legal battle with Citicorp and Citicorp Services Inc., which filed suit in April to block introduction of the MCTC program.

Reynolds said he doubted the Citicorp litigation would succeed in deterring financial institutions from participating in the new program.

Under the MCTC program, Reynolds said, member banks and institutions would be free to set their own charges for the sale of the traveller's cheques. For the time being, he said, the cheques would be issued only in U.S. dollar denominations, but he added plans already are under way for foreign denominations.

Reynolds also said 80 per cent of all traveller's cheques sold in North America also are cashed in North America — the U.S., Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean.

Heintzman Engineers Merger

TORONTO (CP) — Heintzman and Co. Ltd., which had suspended production of its renowned grand pianos last year, is turning them out again — this time with a new corporate image.

Heintzman, only Canadian producer of hand-crafted grand pianos, has merged with Sherlock-Manning Piano Co. Ltd., a long-established Canadian manufacturer of upright models.

The newly-amalgamated company, Heintzman Ltd., has its head office in Hanover, Ont., with William D. Heintzman as president.

The Heintzman firm suspended production of the six-foot D Grand models about a year ago because of economics and the proposed move to Hanover from Toronto.

Better Health Care Urged

The B.C. branch of the Consumers Association of Canada (CAC) Wednesday urged Health Minister Bob McClelland to direct a greater emphasis toward preventive health services in the province.

In a one hour meeting with the minister, two representatives of the CAC said a study of the province's health care system led them to the conclusion that residents, as consumers of health care, could be getting better value for their health tax dollars.

CAC provincial president Jean Douglas and health chairman Barbara Rolls of Victoria said the response from McClelland was generally good.

They said the minister disagreed with none of the issues they raised in their five-page brief, but the age-old problem of funding is a stumbling block for some of the CAC proposals.

The 13,000 member, non-profit and volunteer-run association suggested the health ministry, in conjunction with the education ministry, expand courses in nutrition, health habits and lifestyles at all levels of elelmentary and secondary schools.

Also in preventive care the group recommends public health programs in daycare and preschools be expanded so both learning and physical disabilities may be detected early.

The CAC commended the province for its long term health care programs but offered a number of suggestions to improve the service including the establishment of adult daycare facilities where dependent elderly or disabled younger members of families could be left.

This would allow care for a person who would otherwise need home care while working family members were away from home.

The CAC also urged the ministry to consider a subsidy system for volunteer drivers who use their own vehicles to offset steadily increasing operating costs.

The brief says this would encourage greater participation in this area.

The only disappointment with the meeting with the minister was that representatives of education and human resources ministries were not in attendance, they said.

The CAC had requested a joint meeting because of the overlapping nature of some of their recommendations.

However they plan to arrange future meetings with the other ministries.

The CAC has 100,000 members nation-wide. Its members are dedicated to representing the consumer interest at all times, and has a network of local consumer groups in most areas of the country.

Bystanders DID Respond

LYTTON (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday earlier reports that bystanders stood by as an elderly couple in a wrecked car screamed for help Friday were erroneous.

Police said Harold Banks, 76, and his wife, Beatrice, 71, had been assisted by five motorists who responded to their pleas.

Police earlier said two off-duty Vancouver firemen were solely responsible for rescuing the pair.

Constable Dave Pollock said he did not know whether any firemen had been involved in the rescue but said five men, whose names he would not reveal, would be commended by police.

Henry Kanouse, 29, of Maple Ridge called a Vancouver newspaper to say he had participated in the rescue and would be commended by police.

The car plunged into a gully, coming to rest on the bank of a creek.

Kanouse, who was fishing nearby, tried to help the couple. He was soon joined by four other men.

Maternity Money Sought By UIC

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 60 working mothers at the University of British Columbia (UBC) and Simon Fraser University may have to pay up to $80,000 in maternity benefits back to the Unemployment Insurance Commission. (UIC).

Under the Association of University and College Employees (AUCE) collective agreements at both universities, an employee returning from maternity leave will receive the difference between UIC maternity payments — a maximum of $160 a week — and her regular wage in a lump-sum payment.

"We consider it an incentive to return to work," union representative Melody Rudd said Wednesday in an interview.

But in 1977, the commission began considering the extra $1,200 to $2,000 that at least 60 women have received, maternity benefit over-payments. To date it has demanded that 11 of these women return the money, sometimes more than a year after it was received.

"It seems like women are being penalized for returning to work after they become mothers," said Rudd.

"Everyone is really upset, especially since UIC said four years ago that it would be okay to get this money," she said. The union, however, never obtained a written commitment.

Judy Hawkins, 23, a single mother, a UBC library assistant for five years, was asked to pay back $1,250 when she returned to work last fall after the birth of her second child, a daughter, now 14 months old.

Although she collected the extra benefit four years ago when her son was born, she is not being asked to return that money.

Hawkins appealed the order to a UIC board of referees, who ruled that the payment should be considered income earned while she was on maternity leave.

The union now is seeking a ruling from a UIC umpire, at as yet unscheduled hearing, but the commission has threatened to lay fraud charges and get collection agencies to try to recover the money from other women.

Hawkins believes the board of referees, three older men, decided the case on the basis of their own prejudices about working mothers rather than on its merits.

Wrecker Snafu Led To Crash

BURNABY (CP) — An out-of-gas car involved with the spectacular crash of a semi-trailer truck early Tuesday sat on the Port Mann Bridge for at least 15 minutes before the accident, a highways ministry official said Wednesday.

Pat Carr, regional highways engineer, said it is policy to remove vehicles stalled in no-stopping areas such as the bridge as soon as possible, but said there appeared to have been some confusion in the dispatching of a wrecker to the stalled car.

Police said a semi-trailer truck loaded with 35 tons of copper ore jack-knifed and overturned Tuesday morning after colliding with a vehicle that was stopped behind the stalled car.

2,4-D Program To Go Ahead

KELOWNA (CP) — The provincial government will not abandon its controversial 2,4-D herbicide program for Okanagan Lake despite a city council decision Tuesday to prohibit use of the chemical along the city's foreshore this year, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Wednesday.

He said this latest setback will force the government to find an alternative site on Okanagan Lake for a large-scale test of 2,4-D applications this fall.

Council supported Mayor John Hindle's position that the provincial environment ministry's proposals for fall applications contained insufficient proof that the program would be effective in combatting Eurasian milfoil growth in the lake.

Council also said the government had failed to provide sufficient guarantees that the treatments, which would likely have involved larger doses of the chemical to be effective, would not present hazards to public health.

Hindle said the government should conduct an extensive experimental program on the program's effectiveness but said he is not willing to allow the Kelowna foreshore to be used as a "guinea pig."

Meanwhile, Dr. Peter Newroth, a government expert on the milfoil problem, said aquatic weed harvesters which were to begin work offshore Wednesday were pulled out so they can be sent to the new site when it is selected.

CONTRACT ACCEPTED

KELOWNA (CP) — Fifty-five members of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers employed at Calona Wines Ltd. Wednesday voted 79 per cent to accept the terms of a new two-year contract.

The contract, retroactive to June 1, includes a 52-cent-an-hour wage increase in the first year and 53-cents in the second.

PHILIP WANTED TO PASS UP COMMONWEALTH GAMES

Delesalle Obliges, Then Collects Gold

By SCOTT ABBOTT

EDMONTON (CP) — Philip Delesalle, a 21-year-old student from Victoria, won the men's individual all-round title Wednesday and gave Canada a sweep of the four gold medals in the first Commonwealth Games gymnastics competition.

But he was a reluctant champion, admitting he wanted to pass up the Games and rest for the third trials for the world championship in September in France.

"I would have liked to have stayed out of this competition," Delesalle said, "but everybody thought it was to Canada's advantage to have me performing."

That assessment proved correct. The obliging Delesalle scored 56.40 points on the six exercises—floor, pommel horse, still rings, horse vault, parallel bars and horizontal bar—to turn back silver medallist Lindsay Nylund of Australia, who earned 54.95 points. Jean Choquette of Montreal won the bronze, Canada's seventh medal in gymnastics.

The host country earlier won the women's and men's team championships, and Elfi Schlegel, a 14-year-old from Toronto, led the Canadians to medals with a gold Tuesday in the women's individual event. Sherry Hawco of Cambridge, Ont., and Monica Goermann of Winnipeg each copped a silver for a second-place tie and there was no bronze awarded.

"We came in here figuring we would win two team titles and probably a couple of individual golds, but when we saw the English we said, 'Gee, they have a chance tm beat us'," Delesalle said.

But it was Owen Walstrom of Victoria who finished fourth and Thomas Wilson, the top competitor from England, had to settle for fifth place.

Delesalle said a bone chip in his right wrist, suffered in competition in China, had caused him more problems than in the team event. But he said any surgery to remove the chip would have to wait at least until after the world championships.

"I was happy with everything except the sidehorse and the parallel bars," Delesalle said of his evening's workout. "On the pommel horse, I think when I did my first scissors I caught my foot, and when I started back into circles it threw me off."

He scored a 9.60 on the floor, 9.50 on the rings, 9.40 on both the parallel bars and vault and an 8.75 on the pommel horse, as well as a closing 9.75 — the highest mark scored by any competitor here — on the horizontal bar. The pommel horse is considered one of his strongest events.

"He's had a lot more international experience than the rest of us," said Walstrom when asked to explain Delesalle's pre-eminence. "Plus he's been publicized a lot more too. The international judges know his name and that lps a lot."

Walstrom said Delesalle had been worried during the competition.

"I talked to him. He was a little worried. He said, 'Hey, it's getting close.' I told him not to worry, that he was 'way ahead."

Walstrom said Delesalle is a stubborn competitor who follows his own lead and is difficult to coach, partly because he is skilled enough to carry off tough routines that might faze other gymnasts.

But Delesalle seemed anything but a hard man to coach when he discussed the question of athletic scholarship offers from United States universities.

"I'm going to enter first year at the University of Victoria this year," Delesalle said. "I've received about 10 offers from the States but I don't want to go there. The Canadian government has done a good job funding us and we have the coaches right here."

ROGIE'S FOUR-HITTER KEEPS MUSSELS WARM

Don Rogelstad, the man in charge Wednesday, turned things over to Victoria Mussels' field manager Jim Chapman today because rest happens to be a benefit for a pitcher in pro baseball.

Rogelstad, 29 and Victoria's pitching coach, turned in his sharpest performance of the season Wednesday at Bend, Ore., as the Mussels defeated the Timberhawks 7-2 in Northwest League play.

Going the distance for the first time, "Rogie" allowed only four hits and walked only one as Victoria chalked up its fourth victory in five games.

Mussels remain in Bend to wind up a nine-game road trip tonight but Rogelstad returned to Victoria "for a rest" and to prepare for Boise's appearance in a three-game series at Royal Athletic Park, starting Friday night.

"Coming off the road," Rogie explained, "it's hard to find a fresh pitcher. We did this earlier in the season and it paid off in a victory."

Rogelstad also wants to be on hand to greet another pitcher. Former Cleveland Indian great and hall-of-famer Bob Feller will be a visitor on Saturday.

Feller, now 59, has been invited to "throw some." Rogelstad and Chapman have persuaded some of Victoria's press, radio and television personalities to stand up at the plate Saturday afternoon and try to hit a Feller fastball.

In Boise, Bob Potts and Paul Kirsch led the way as Victoria's batters supported Rogelstad with a 10-hit attack. Pottq banged out two doubles and a home run while Kirsch connected for a single and a two-run homer. Doug Morganti also had two hits.

GRAHAM SMITH

Canadian Power Show On Last Swimming Day

EDMONTON (CP) — When Graham Smith won the 100-metre breaststroke Wednesday in the pool named for his late father, he picked up Canada's 26th Commonwealth Games gold medal, the most the country has ever won.

A few hours later, he became the first athlete to take home six golds from a single Games when he swam the breaststroke leg of the 4x100-metre medley relay.

Inspired by the tireless Edmontonian, the Canadian team closed out the swimming program by winning four of the last eight events and emerged for the first time as the dominant swimming power of the Commonwealth.

Fifteen-year-old Robin Corsiglia of Beaconsfield, Que., upset Margaret Kelly of England, the prohibitive favorite, in the women's 100-metre breaststroke. Kelly has the second fastest time in the world for the event this year and Corsiglia was not ranked in the top 15.

Then Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton, who had been no better than third in the heats, moved into high gear to defeat Lisa Forrest and Glenda Robertson of Australia in the final of the women's 200 backstroke.

Outside the pool, Canada completed a sweep of the four gymnastics medals as Philip Delesalle of Victoria topped the field in four of the six disciplines for an easy victory in the men's individual competition.

In the only other non-aquatic final of the day, New Zealand sharpshooter John Wooley of New Zealand fired 193 of a possible 200 to win the skeet event. Paul Bentley and Joseph Neville of England took the silver and bronze medals, just ahead of Fred Altmann and Don Kwasnycia of Toronto.

Australia's impressive distance swimmers won two more events as Tracey Wickham, who broke a world record Saturday in the 800 freestyle, nearly did it again in the 400 and Max Metzger was a comfortable winner in the men's 1,500 freestyle.

Sharron Davies of England completed a double by winning the women's 400-metre individual medley and Edmontonians cheered as Graham Smith's sister, Becky, swam strongly to take the silver, just as she did at the 1974 Games in Christchurch, N.Z.

That left Canada with 15 victories in the 29 swimming events to the Australians' 10, Davies's two and two by New Zealand.

In the over-all gold medal count, with 70 events completed, Canada had 30 to the Aussies' 17 and England's 12.

The opening round of wrestling offered strong evidence of more Canadian medals to come as all 10 members of the team won their opening matches.

Three Canadian boxers made the finals as flyweight Ian Clyde of Ottawa knocked out a Northern Irish opponent, light heavyweight Roger Fortin of Montreal stopped a West Samoan and light middleweight Kelly Perlette of Spruce Grove, Alta., won a decision over another fighter from the same Pacific island.

Roddy MacDonald of Toronto appeared to be a sure finalist in the middleweight division when he was undone by his own over-aggressiveness.

After knocking down Delroy Parkes of England for the second time, he was disqualified for hitting the Englishman before he regained his feet.

In cycling, the tandem sprint entry of Jocelyn Lovell of Toronto and Gord Singleton of Niagara Falls, Ont., reached the final with two narrow victories over Ron Boyle and Stephen Goodall of Australia.

B.C. Women Leading

Mary Everard of Hallamshire, Sheffield, Eng., fired a four-under-par 68 to grab the first-round lead ahead of Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont., who had set a new women's mark on the 5,774-yard course with a 69 only 15 minutes earlier.

Nobody else in the field of more than 90 could match or break par.

Aside from "over-clubbing a few times," Everard conquered the layout with excellent long iron play and an early decision "to go straight for the flags."

"On these big greens, one doesn't want to be left with long puts."

West, a three-time Canadian junior champion and the runner-up in 1977 in the amateur, said her round was built on a solid start.

The rest of the field was four shots or better behind the second-place West. Many of the entrants shot in the high 70s and 80s.

Also part of the amateur event is the interprovincial team match which wraps up today. British Columbia held a one-shot edge over Ontario after the first 18 holes Wednesday.

This Is a Year for Tennis Dropouts

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

What a giant headache!

Two more players have reached the semi-finals of the women's singles event in the Fifth Annual Victoria Times Public Parks tennis tournament but the girl who may have been the biggest threat of them all has dropped out.

Suddenly, this seems to be the year of the dropouts.

First it was Art Hobbs, who returned to Victoria as a tennis whiz after two years at college in the United States.

He departed from the men's singles ranks after shocking Racquet Club of Victoria pro Russ Hartley to capture the Victoria City title and earn a berth on the Island team to go to Penticton for the B.C. Summer Games on Aug. 19 and 20 (the same weekend the Times Tourney winds up).

While Art was doing that, Tara Ney, daughter of Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney, was stunning them all in the City women's event.

Unseeded just like Hobbs, she took women's champ Sandra Moss through three tough sets in a thrilling battle before losing narrowly in the "A" event and then easily won the "B" contest.

A non-club member who was also winning her matches effortlessly in the Times Tourney, Tara realized she had a problem when she, too, won a berth on the Island team for the Summer Games.

Tara had actually decided to pass up the Penticton honor and try for the Times title instead but was told by Vancouver Island Tennis Association president Ted Smythe she was too late. Her name had already gone forward for the team competition and the Island would not be allowed a substitute.

She had the chance of winning two Times titles, in fact, as she and her husband Kim Blank also had to withdraw from the mixed doubles after reaching the last four out of a starting field of 36 couples.

Kim, who has decided to make the trip to Penticton with his wife, has dropped out of the 128-man draw in the men's singles after reaching the last eight and that will put Perry Evans, who recently beat Kent Campbell, 6-3, 6-0, through to the semi-finals.

Boy, talk about dropouts!

The withdrawal of Tara and Kim sends Kerry Chan and Charlayne Joe (semi-finalists last year as well) through to the final of the mixed doubles.

And there was a dropout in the other semi-final, where Robert Oldfield and Linda Chiu had to withdraw because Linda is playing in a Pacific Rim volleyball tournament in Hawaii on our finals weekend.

That gives Chris Barton and Janet Arnold a default into the final, which will be played along with the three singles finals on Sunday, Aug.20.

Claire Ducluzeau, an 18-year-old UVic social sciences student who hopes to get into law school and who is working for the summer in the Victoria Press classified ad department. She is making her first appearance in the Times Tourney. In fact, it's the first tournament of any kind for Claire, who says she doesn't get too nervous in competition and likes to win.

Marge Grainger, a meditator who believes it helps improve her tennis. She is making her second try for a Times title after being defeated in the semi-finals last year by eventual runner-up Peggy Glegg. Meditation has the opposite effect to tennis for Marge, she says. She likes to sit and relax and think and when she takes to the court once more she finds she plays better.

Claire, who squeezed past Morven Morrison, 12-10, the previous round, reached the semis by default when Tara Ney pulled out. She plays Marge, who beat Sylvia Scott, 9-3, in the quarters.

And it will be Marilyn against Kathy in the other semi-final at Oak Bay's Henderson Park on Saturday, Aug. 19.

Bombers, Alouettes Terrors On the Road

By The Canadian Press

Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Montreal Alouettes took advantage of their hosts' generosity and they each went home with two points and another win to their credit in Canadian Football League action Wednesday.

Winnipeg dumped Hamilton Tiger-Cats 29-7 and Montreal defeated Calgary Stampeders 28-14.

The Bombers used three key turnovers in the first half to score 21 points and take a lead that was never in jeopardy. Hamilton, playing its worst game of the year, could generate little offence and was porous on defence.

"What happened out there tonight was a terrible disgrace" said Ticat owner Harold Ballard, who promised the club would be making changes. "People won't be spending their money for something they don't like."

The Bombers were sparked by two touchdowns from running back Jim Washington in the first quarter. Quarterback Ralph Brock and Joe Poplawski added the other Bomber touchdowns, and kicker Bernie Ruoff chipped in with a single and four conversions.

The Ticats dug themselves into a deep hole from which they never escaped in the first half. By the end of the game, Hamilton had lost the ball twice on interceptions and twice on fumbles. Hamilton fumbled its first chance at the ball, Washington scored two plays later and Winnipeg never looked back.

With an injured Jimmy Edwards on the sidelines, Hamilton's offence showed little pep. The Ticats had a net offence of 175 yards, only 84 yards along the ground, while Winnipeg piled up 390 yards in net offence.

"I guess we've got to go out and get better players," Ticat coach Tom Dimitroff said afterwards. "You can't play with half a team."

In Calgary, Montreal were forced to wear their home uniforms because repeated washings had ruined their road jerseys and the Alouettes must have felt at home.

Alouette touchdowns came on passes from quarterback Joe Barnes to Larry Smith, Bob Gaddis and Craig Labbett. Don Sweet converted all three and added field goals of 38 and 29 yards.

Victorians' Sweep Wrecked by Welts

Keith Welts played the spoiler Wednesday in the 56th annual North West Seniors Golf Association tournament.

The Seattle golfer edged Colwood's Vic Painter, a former City Amateur champion, one up to prevent an all-Victoria look to today's semi-finals.

Southpaw Gord Millin, also of Colwood, and two members of the host Oak Bay club — George Bigelow and Bill Thompson — claimed the other semi-final berths.

Welts was to play Bigelow while Millin went against Thompson today for the right to advance to Friday's championship finale.

Bigelow, a former Canadian seniors titleholder, knocked off 1976 champion Harold Weston of Portland, one up; Thompson, a four-time winner of the PNWSGA crown, defeated clubmate Ray Cranston, 2 and 1; while Millin scored a two-up decision over William Steele of Seattle.

Friday's final will be under way at 9:20 a.m.

Big Night for Joe

Joe Hudon, a 27-year-old harness racing veteran, dominated Wednesday's standardbred card at Sandown Park by winning half of the eight races, including three in a row.

The evening gave Hudon an unofficial total of 38 wins after 39 days of the 57-day meet to tie Dave Jungquist for second place in the driver standings.

Hudon started the evening off by guiding favored March Stream to victory in the first race and added wins behind second-choice Partner Jove in the fourth, favored Spindrift Two in the fifth and Banner Dundee in the sixth.

In the sixth, Banner Dundee was rated 17-1 and paid $36.90 to win and combined with runner-up Debbie Joe for a healthy $131.20 exactor after beating outh the eight-time winner in the stretch.

Whitecaps Advance

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Whitecaps downed Toronto Metros-Croatia 4-0 in first-round North American Soccer League playoff game marked by controversial calls and flagrant fouls Wednesday.

Toronto, which lodged a protest following the game, finished the contest with only nine men after Sead Susic and Marko Vujkovic were red-carded by referee Gino D'Ippolito.

Vancouver forward Bobby Campbell scored two goals while Alan Hinton and Bobby Lenarduzzi added the others as 30,811 fans, the largest home-crowd of the season, watched the Whitecaps win their 14th consecutive game.

Vancouver now advances to the second round of the National Conference playoffs for a home-and-home series with Portland Timbers, 2-1 winners Wednesday over Washington Diplomats.

Hinton's goal led Toronto to protest the game. Campbell, Vancouver's striker, collided with Bilecki while going up to get a head on a cross from defender Bobby Lenarduzzi. While the Toronto goalkeeper lay injured on the field, Hinton knocked the ball into the open net.

Metro-Croatia players surrounded the referee and argued unsuccessfully for more than five minutes.

Vujkovic was sent off at 1:50 of the second half after an altercation with Vancouver defender Paul Nelson. The Whitecaps capitalized on their two-man advantage with Bobby Lenarduzzi blasting Vancouver's fourth goal from 15 yards out.

The Whitecaps were called for 19 fouls while Toronto was given 12 and cautioned by D'Ippolito several times for hard tackling.

Franz Beckenbauer, Vito Dimitrijevic and Steve Hunt also scored for the Cosmos. Mike England and Gordon Wallace netted the Seattle goals.

The Bridge Expert

When today's deal came up in a duplicate game, our South declarer arrived at a game contract in notrump. This contract was there for the taking, but if one of the defenders had come up with a couple of deceptive falsecards, he almost surely would have prevented declarer from making two overtricks. And, as all duplicate players know, overtricks are worth their weight in gold.

North-South vulnerable.
South deals.

SOUTH

◇ A 6 3 2
♣ A Q J 10 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

At virtually every table West opened a spade, which was taken by East's ace, after which East returned the ten of spades, South's king taking the trick. As is evident, South now had his nine tricks: one spade, two diamonds and six clubs.

But, reasoned the various South declarers, what good are nine tricks at notrump if ten or more tricks can be made at hearts? At a heart contract, even if the adversely held hearts were divided 4-2, declarer would lose only two hearts and a spade (and if the outstanding hearts were divided 3-3, declarer would lose only one heart trick).

So, after winning his spade king at trick two, declarer cashed all of his clubs — and each West defender discarded either three of four spades, clinging to his hearts (in view of the dummy). With the spades no longer a threat, the various declarers next led a heart, and eventually gathered in 11 tricks.

But suppose that the West defenders' first two discards had been the ten of hearts, followed by the deuce of hearts. Surely South would have been afraid to lead a heart later, for fear that West, who had given a high-low signal in hearts, had the heart ace and would now cash his spades. Wouldn't South have settled for nine tricks?

In my opinion, West should have given a high-low signal in hearts, for if South had the ace of hearts, he would always make six heart tricks. So, at no cost, West should have tried to deceive declarer.

Jobless Giving Up Says NDP

NDP labor critic Karen Sanford (Comox) has cautioned that an apparent small decline in the B.C. unemployment rate is no reason for optimism since some people have given up looking for work.

Statistics Canada reported Tuesday that the unemployment rate in B.C. fell from 7.8 per cent in June to 7.7 per cent in July.

"The fact is, the actual number of persons unemployed rose by 6,000 between June and July, a period when traditionally job prospects are at their best," Sanford said.

Sanford attributed the statistical decline to a drop in the labor force of 5,000 people who gave up looking for jobs or were forced to leave B.C. in search for work.

"It is a very unhappy situation when supposedly good news about falling unemployment is offset with the bad news that families are dislocated in the search for work that their own province cannot provide."

Sanford was also critical of Labor Minister Allan Williams for failure to indicate what the Socred government plans to do to combat the unemployment and the decline in the labor force.

DC-10 Evacuated

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — A smoking engine on an American Airlines DC-10 arriving in Hamilton from New York on Tuesday resulted in the evacuation of all 261 persons aboard by emergency chutes, the airline said.

L-o-o-o-n-g Ferry Waits Are Going to Get Worse

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Traffic congestion on B.C. Ferries can only grow worse in the years ahead.

Traffic manager Bill Bouchard concedes travellers had to wait up to four hours at the peak of the B.C. Day holiday weekend but there is little the corporation can do about it.

"We have reached the saturation point. We have 23 sailings within 16 hours plus the midnight ferry.

"Given the number of vessels we have and the limited facilities at the terminals there is little more we can do."

Bouchard said the main route between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay carries 10,000 vehicles per day.

There are no other vessels available and only limited room at the terminals to use them even if they were available.

Possible long-term solutions include expanding the Tsawwassen terminal and raising the fares to provide funds for expansion.

In the shorter term, the corporation is considering ways to level out the peaks and valleys in order to move more people with the existing facilities.

This would include educating the travelling public to when the slack times are so they can avoid the long lineups, Bouchard said.

"But even here there are limits. For example, tourists are just not tuned into arriving at a strange city late in the evening. They are on the move before noon and there is nothing that can be done to change that pattern."

Local travellers, however, should be aware that there is seldom a lineup after supper, except Friday nights and Sunday nights.

"Tuesday was a rough day," he said, "the wait was up to four hours at noon but even on that day it was all cleaned up by the 8 p.m. sailing."

There were signs the travelling public is taking steps to avoid the peak hours and this is creating new problems.

For example, they travelled on Sunday and Tuesday to avoid the predicted Monday traffic jam and created longer line-ups on both Sunday and Tuesday than on Monday.

"Nobody could have predicted that. Still, we had all our available ferries available for the Tuesday rush. The Queen of Alberni was repaired and back in service Tuesday afternoon."

Bouchard said many people have asked him why the Queen of Surrey sits idle while traffic piles up at the terminals.

"It would be very expensive to renovate the Surrey for use on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay run. It requires a very large crew and is costly to operate. It was bought in 1974 for an emergency situation and it filled its need."

It would be inefficent to load during heavy traffic periods.

"I don't know what they are going to do with the Surrey. That is still being discussed."

Opposition Grows To Hydro Scheme

Citizen groups from the Sunshine Coast, Lasqueti Island and Vancouver Island have joined forces in a fight to block B.C. Hydro's plans for a major transmission line linking Squamish and Qualicum.

Hydro is studying the possibility of building a 500-kilovolt line from the mainland to Vancouver Island. The twin line would start at Cheekye substation near Squamish, run up the Sunshine Coast, travel under parts of the Straits of Georgia and Malaspina and, depending on the route, use Lasqueti, Texada, Denman or Hornby islands as stepping stones.

The line, which Hydro says will be necessary by 1983, would terminate at Dunsmuir substation near Qualicum Bay. Another line would run down the Island to Victoria.

A number of groups has opposed the project, but until recently they have been dealing with Hydro on an individual basis.

But those days are over, announced a spokesman for the new coalition, and from now on the groups will present a united front.

"We tried to talk to Hydro and were charmed by their public relations people into believing that our complaints and problems would be seriously considered," said Howard White of the Pender Harbor and District Ratepayers' Association.

In addition to White's group the coalition is comprised of the Sunshine Coast Regional District, the Lasqueti Island steering committee and the Sakinaw Lake Owners and Leaseholders' Association.

Support for the fight is also coming from the Coombs-Hilliers-Errington Residents Association which is opposed to the Qualicum-to-Victoria section of the line.

AirCan Union Hopeful

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiators for Air Canada's 7,500 ground-service employees hope new talks with the company can resolve the problems which prompted their rejection of a tentative contract.

Barry Shaw, chief negotiator for the International Association of Machinists, told reporters today that talks could resume early next week if the company is willing.

Air Canada has already said it would return to the bargaining table if the workers rejected the pact, which would have provided a 16-per-cent wage increase over 25 months, retroactive to April 3.

While the final tally of the ratification vote isn't expected until late today, the result was determined last Friday when Montreal and Toronto members, who comprise about three-quarters of the ground-service group, voted overwhelmingly for rejection.

'Non-Conditional' Offer Made to Fired VGH Nurse

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the troubled Vancouver General Hospital has made a "non-conditional" offer of reinstatement to one of three nursing directors fired last month and eased the way for the return of the other two.

Larry Truitt said in a statement that the reinstatement will be offered to dismissed clinical nursing director June Nakamoto "free of any conditions whatsoever" and that two other nursing directors - Lorea Ytterberg and Win Miller — would be rehired with amended conditions.

Truitt refused to discuss details of the offers - which in Nakamoto's case have changed from previous offers in which many conditions were laid down for rehiring.

The hospital statement came after at least three further resignations from senior members of the nursing staff Wednesday, bringing to 11 the number of leading nurses who have resigned over what they claim is inadequate care for patients.

The resignations came from Mario Guerero, assistant supervisor of surgical nursing who has been at VGH for 10 years; Helen Moore, head of the E-8 surgical ward and Barbara Verchere, a management nurse who has been at the hospital since beginning training nine years ago.

Health Minister Bob McClelland, when advised of the resignations, reiterated that the government has no intention of of stepping into the situation at this time.

He said he thought that both the administration and the nurses were at fault in discussing their points of view.

Government intervention, he said, would not be considered until at least after a meeting scheduled for Monday with the Registered Nurses Association of Britih Columbia.

Truitt said in the statement that financial constraints are behind staffing problems and asked "co-operation of all those nurses who have remained in their positions to assure that standards of patient care do not suffer.

FEDERAL PRISONERS FASTING IN PROTEST

William Head and other inmates in federal prisons across Canada are fasting today to observe Prison Justice Day commemorating those prisoners who have died in prison over the past year.

At William Head, only four of 124 inmates ate breakfast while another 10 had coffee.

The majority are not expected to eat lunch or dinner although director Arlie Bender said cold meals will be prepared regardless.

In some institutions, such as Millhaven in Ontario, inmates are also refusing to work today but that's not the case at William Head where prisoners reported to work stations as usual.

A spokesman for the Vancouver Island Regional Corrections Centre on Wilkinson Road said there was a full count at breakfast today.

Gliding: The High That Tops All Highs

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

HANG glider pilots on gull-shaped wings circled above Grouse Mountain trying to catch elusive wind currents and forget their mortality for a while.

Earthbound fans lazed on the grass of Paradise Bowl idly listening to rock bands, tossing frisbees and enjoying the beer garden as the gliders floated overhead like brightly colored butterflies.

The occasion was a combination rock concert and the four-day Canadian International Hang Gliding Championships which all took place on the B.C. Day weekend.

The championships attracted 84 pilots who competed for $10,000 in prize money.

Australians Steve Moyes and John Ogden captured the top two spots. British Columbian John Duthie came in third, beating out professionals from the U.S., England, Scotland and Venezuela.

The kites, which ranged from the very plain to airbrushed works of art, cost between $900 and $1,500 each.

Added to that basic price tag is another $400 for harness and parachute plus $300 for wind-monitoring and other equipment.

"Gliders look more like little sail planes each year. In the early days they looked more like pointy parachutes," explained Peter Brock, a competitor who has been designing kites since the sport started five years ago in California.

In the beginning glider pilots were daredevils who jumped off cliffs, hoped for the best and rarely managed to stay airborne more than a few minutes.

Today's pilot must be a master strategist, a meteorology expert and possess a great deal of finesse to stay competitive.

Like the mythical Greek Icarus, who met his fate while soaring towards the sun on man-made wings, glider pilots have a sometimes-fatal fascination for giding 50 pounds of aluminum and plastic to incredible heights.

Gliders have also reached heights of 10,000 feet and stayed up 11 hours by riding thermals which are rising columns of warm air.

In the words of Dean Tanji, another California pilot: "When you look down at all those snow-covered peaks and forests, it puts you in a place no one has ever been. There's no other feeling quite like it."

●

Professional hang glider pilots from the world championships held on Grouse Mountain last weekend will compete on Salt Spring Island Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

About 60 pilots and gliders are expected to attend the meet, sponsored by the Victoria Hang Gliding Club.

Library Proposal Jolted But Alive

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said today he may exercise his mayoral privilege in referring back to council the proposal to relocate the central library, which aldermen threw out by a 4-3 margin Wednesday night.

Young said his decision to bring up the matter again will depend on what happens tonight when Victoria city council decides whether to support the proposed lease of new library quarters in the provincial government building on Broughton.

Oak Bay and Saanich have already approved the move, and city council is expected to do likewise.

Young said he believes Esquimalt owes it to the other municipalities — its partners in ownership of the Greater Victoria library system — to reconsider.

"But on the strength of the arguments raised last night I can't see anyone changing their minds," he added.

The majority of Esquimalt aldermen made clear their preference to own a building rather than sign a 10-year lease with the provincial government.

Ald. Larry Mann, Esquimalt's representative on the library board, surprised some of his council colleagues by joining those opposed to the rental agreement.

He said there is a federal grant available for library construction, and also suggested the library should come under the Capital Region District so people from outside Greater Victoria who use the library will help pay for it.

Mayor Young favored the move, saying it is the last opportunity to get a new central library.

"We have a responsibility to the city as a whole. We haven't got any major costs compared to Oak Bay and Saanich," Young said.

"Saying we don't need a good central library is like saying the dockyard doesn't need Ottawa."

Ald. Barry Gilbert urged council to think about the taxpayers.

He said there is too much uncertainty about the cost of the new Urban Transit Authority Act, the new hospital and rising property taxes.

Ald. Jim McEvay said it is a motherhood issue: "We all like to own our own homes, but it is an excellent location with parking and there is no other alternative."

MAN GIVES LIFE FOR GIRLFRIEND

A 23-year-old man who pushed his girlfriend out of the path of a camper truck only to be struck down himself died Wednesday afternoon in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Michael Bouchard of 58-3498 Lovat was hit Saturday afternoon as he and his girlfriend Heather Pringle, 21, were leaving a house at 3103 Balfour.

Police said Bouchard, who saw the truck swerve down the street and over the boulevard, pushed Miss Pringle out of the way but couldn't jump clear himself.

He was knocked 50 feet through the air over a fence into a neighbor's yard. The truck smashed into a corner of the house, causing an estimated $18,000 damage.

3 Held After Raid

Two youths and a woman are in custody after Colwood RCMP raided a unit at Craigflower Motel late Wednesday night and recovered about $7,000 worth of coins, jewelry and cash stolen in weekend break-ins in View Royal.

The trio was expected to appear in provincial court later today charged with possession of stolen property.

Arabs, Americans Eye Sidney Island

An Arabian company and three wealthy Americans have shown an active interest in buying Sidney Island, three kilometres east of Sidney, co-owner Jack Todd said today.

"But it is such a beautiful place we hope and pray the provincial government will make an offer so it can be turned into a park."

Todd, a Victoria man, owns nine shares and former Victoria mayor Dick Wilson owns the other share of the property.

An agent for Arabian interests said he will be in the Victoria area soon, as early as next week, to view the eight-kilometre-long island with 20 kilometres of coastline.

Asking price is $3.7 million.

For sale is all of the island except 200 acres in the Sidney Spit area, which is a provincial park. The remaining area is 1,783 acres which contains a house and a sheep farm.

Todd said the island once belonged to George Courtenay but he sold it to a Victoria syndicate in 1909, retaining the northern 200 acres which eventually became a park.

In 1958 the remaining members of the syndicate were about to sell out to a Los Angeles group when Todd, who had a small interest, bought a larger share to keep ownership in Canada.

"Since 1958 we have built up the wildlife on the island and now there is a very large deer population along with squirrels and chipmunks."

He said birds are in abundance and it is a major stop for many on their migrations.

"We have offered it for sale but we hope the right people buy it, not the wrong people," he said.

The sale is being handled by James Park of Pemberton Holmes Ltd., which received inquiries from three Los Angeles interests and from an Eastern Canada man who is looking at a possible development for the island.

Some people have also inquired from Vancouver.

Brochures on the island have been distributed in several countries.

The sale price includes sheep, a house and farm machinery.

Well, Back To the Gloomies

For the first time in weeks, it won't be bikini weather in Greater Victoria this weekend.

Weatherman Norm Dressler said today the heat-wave has disappeared for at least a few days, to be replaced by cooler, cloudy and occasionally wet weather.

Widely scattered showers throughout the area today did little more than settle the dust, although Dressler reported a "good sprinkle" at the airport this morning.

It was the first rain since the electrical storm July 26.

Another low-pressure system expected to move in Friday will bring more of the same, and the forecast for the weekend is occasional rain Saturday tapering off to showers on Sunday.

Victoria's high temperature for Wednesday was 25, compared with Tuesday's high of 31.

Tips Given on Tots' Eating Habits

Food for Thought

By DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Virtually all parents have at least one worry in common: Are their children getting enough of the right foods to eat? And there's some justification for their concern. Nutritionally speaking, the preschool years are very important.

To make life easier for parents, we have reviewed some of their common worries, and we offer the following tips:

—"My 2-year-old seems to be eating less." This alarms many parents, especially those who are new to the game. However, changes in appetite are to be expected. During the first year of life, the average baby gains about 16 pounds and grows 10 inches. Such rapid growth requires a lot of calories and nutrients. In contrast, a 2- to 6-year-old usually grows no more than two or three inches a year.

Remember, too, that a preschooler's activity level varies greatly from day to day and from child to child. A very active toddler may eat twice as much as a more sedentary child.

Also, the feeling that your child is "eating like a bird" may be something of an optical illusion. On the average, a 2-year-old needs only 1,300 calories a day, and a 5-year-old requires about 1,600. That amount of food may look very small when compared to what's on his parents' plates.

—"My youngster wants to eat at strange times." This can be a problem if you let it become one. No mother should be a short-order cook for her family. But at the same time, there's no reason why a person should become hungry only three times a day. Active children do get hungry at strange times, but you can train a child to help himself to snacks that have been set aside for this purpose. Things like a hard-boiled egg, fruit, a peanut butter sandwich or a piece of cheese are satisfying and nutritious snacks. But avoid keeping things like soft drinks, candy or cookies handy for youngsters' snacking.

—"My child never finishes a meal." For the sake of family relations and convenience, a child should eat at least the main meal with the rest of the family. But, given the vagaries of a preschooler's appetite, he or she may not be very hungry then. Too large servings are discouraging to a child — and they also encourage the parent to nag "clean your plate." Let the youngster serve himself as soon as he's able, and urge him to take small portions with the option of going back for "seconds." Remember, too, that young children get tired of trying to cope with adult-size forks and spoons. An offer to help may solve that problem.

—"My preschooler seems to like only desserts." The best way to minimize this nutrional problem — for the whole family — is to serve nutritious desserts, such as fruit, milk pudding, ice cream or ice milk. You also might try letting a child have dessert when he says he wants no more dinner, leaving the unfinished plate of food on the table. Many children will go back to the main course after dessert if the plate is still there.

—"My youngster simply doesn't like what the rest of us eat." To a certain extent, he's entitled. After all, we adults often dislike certain foods. If a child dislikes a few foods, there's no need to worry. Nutrients in most foods can be obtained from others. But if he shuns whole classes of foods, such as vegetables or meats, it's probably a temporary phase. In the meantime, do not nag or use strong-arm tactics. Instead, look for nutritional equivlents. For example, cheese, eggs, fish and poultry are good substitutes for meat, and a sufficient variety of fruits can substitute for vegetables.

Finally, try to make meals a pleasant, relaxing experience for the entire family. Most preschoolers do outgrow their eating vagaries. If your youngster is healthy and offered the right food, he'll take in the nourishment he needs — especially if you set a good example.

'BABY TALK' HAS TO GO

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Our 6-year-old son still has a tendency to speak like a younger child. When is the best time to start treatment for this problem? Should we go along with the idea that he'll outgrow it?—Mrs. T.C.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Now, right now, is the ideal time to begin speech therapy. A speech disorder is a distinct handicap. It is estimated that more than two million children have speech defects which interfere with their social relationships and with their scholastic achievement.

Adults, too, often pay a penalty for speech defects that were traced to childhood and were expected to disappear by themselves.

Childhood speech is often charming, and sometimes the child is encouraged to persist in that manner of speaking long after it should have stopped.

Speech may account for a child's acceptance or rejection by classmates in the formative years. If the speech is babyish, he is teased and mimicked. The psychological impact is obvious.

The first approach to the problem should be a complete examination of the nose, throat and vocal apparatus. Speech problems may be caused by a small band of tissue that ties down the tongue or a malformation of the jaw or palate. Habit patterns that distort speech are easily acquired. Allowing them to continue without any form of treatment tends to make them fixed and difficult to eradicate.

The science of speech therapy has made enormous strides in the past 20 years. Almost all large university centres, medical schools and hospitals have speech departments. Newly developed techniques and electronic instruments can "chart" a speech defect, establish the reasons for it and outline the ideal form of treatment.

Since children learn to speak by mimicking those who surround them, good hearing is essential to learning. Far too often an undisclosed hearing impairment may be responsible for a child's speech defect. Once the exact cause is determined, intensive treatment by speech therapists is essential. The advantages of speech therapy are great, but it must be emphasized that a delay in beginning it only serves to make the results more difficult to attain.

Little attention is paid to the fact that squash and racquet ball players are subject to special dangers, especially when glasses are worn.

It has been suggested that industrial plastic safety lenses be worn, mounted in strong frames, in order to avoid the impact of both the ball and racquet.

Bio-dex

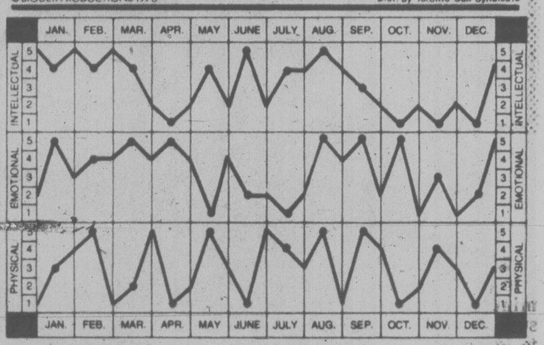
Aug. 13/78

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- Don't be intolerant of the shortcomings of others. Deal with your own failings first.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- If you're in the middle of a disagreement, don't be too opinionated. Your sympathies may lie with the wrong party.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Socialize this evening. You'll be noticed and appreciated, and this could lead to a long-lasting friendship.

What do "highs" mean? A physical high means you tend to be strong and full of vigor. An emotional high means you will be more creative and optimistic. An intellectual high is an indication of quick logical thinking. Remember, highs don't guarantee anything. They just indicate the times when you are most likely to be productive. It still takes effort on your part to make things really happen.

Common ¢ents

So you find an apartment where the price is right and you are eager to sign the lease. If utilities are not included, wait until you call the utility company to learn what the previous tenant paid during the coldest and hottest months.

How easy and energy efficient it is to cook enough sauce and spaghetti for a meal now and a casserole to freeze for later. But don't cook-to-tender the spaghetti for the casserole. If you do, the pasta will be too pastey when you reheat the casserole.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Why can't women be as broad-minded as men? We've been married 15 years, and my wife is doing a super job with our home and children, but she's letting a small incident she happened to witness make a difference in our lives.

Now, you're a business woman, Abby, and you know how hard it is to keep a good secretary. Mine has been with me for five years and she does a great job. She's always on time, she's efficient, and the price is right.

Well, last week my wife dropped in at the office, and she happened to see me hug my secretary. I've made friendly gestures like this for some time to show I appreciate her, but now my wife is steamed, and she's giving me a hard time.

Abby, will you please say something in your column about how hard it is to find a good secretary? JULIUS

DEAR JULIUS: A good plumber is also hard to find! I mean one who comes immediately when you call him, has all the parts he needs with him and does the job at a price that's right. How would you like to come home and find your wife "showing her appreciation" by hugging him?

The next time you want to show your "appreciation," try money.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader that you took Catholic instruction to better understand Catholicism — "to learn, not turn." What a beautiful idea! I'm Catholic and regularly read publications of other religions.

Our small parish has conducted a weekly series where ministers and pastors are invited to tell us about their beliefs and show us their churches (unfortunately there is no synagogue nearby).

I hope your example prompts others among your millions of readers to become more curious and understanding, and less prejudiced and blindly accusative.

A.M., JR.

DEAR A.M.: So do I. Prejudice is based on ignorance. I can't stress strongly enough the importance of learning about religions that differ from our own.

MEN DOING LOT MORE COOKING

Men have long played an important role in the kitchen. Just take a look at any list of great chefs of the world. Or check out the best-selling cookbooks of James Beard, Paul Bocuse or even the "ghoulish" gourmet Vincent Price.

Today, the man's role in the kitchen has evolved from the restaurant and publishing realm to an everyday occurence. In the United States, for example, 25 per cent of men are chefs in their own homes, while 45 per cent participate in family food shopping.

The reason? More women working outside of the home than ever before. And, that's only for starters.

Soaring restaurant prices may be another contributing factor. And, just the plain old pleasure of creative cooking may be another.

VEAL WITH AN AVOCADO FLAIR

2 teaspoons parsley flakes
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
1 lb. veal cutlets, trimmed of fat and pounded ¼" thin
1 cup bread crumbs
4 tablespoons corn oil
2 tablespoons butter
1 California avocado, sliced
2 medium tomatoes, sliced
½ cup hollandaise sauce

Beat parsley, salt and pepper into eggs in a wide bowl. Immerse veal in beaten egg. Coat with bread crumbs. Melt 2 tablespoons oil and 1 tablespoon butter in large frying pan over medium heat until bubbly. Saute breaded cutlets on both sides until browned and crisp. Add remaining oil and butter as needed.

Place cutlets on cookie sheet; do not crowd so they will remain crisp. Place avocado slices in centre of each cutlet. Top avocado with tomato slices. Spoon hollandaise on top. Place under medium hot broiler for a few minutes until sauce is slightly browned and everything is heated through.

Serves four.

Breakfast Important

QUESTION:
I can't face food first thing in the morning but by lunch time, I'm famished. Do you have any suggestions for me?

ANSWER:
Try to pack a breakfast to take along to work with you. You could eat it before you start work or during your morning coffee break. The pamphlet A Quick Breakfast for People on the Go, available from your local health unit, has suggestions for breakfast that can be prepared the previous evening. For example, your "bag breakfast" could include a small can of fruit juice, some granola and a carton of yogurt.

Breakfast is a very important meal for your body as it has not had food for possibly 15 hours. Without nourishment, you may feel sluggish, tired, unable to concentrate and may make more mistakes. Also, you may have difficulty obtaining all the nutrients your body requires in just two meals a day instead of three.

QUESTION:
When I bake for my family, can I make the products more nourishing by substituting honey for sugar?

ANSWER:
You can substitute honey for sugar in many of your recipes, but remember honey has almost twice the sweetness of sugar so the flavor will be greatly altered. When added to cake, cookie or bread doughs, honey gives added keeping qualities, chewy texture, and a browner color. In bread and rolls, your substitute is one cup honey for one cup sugar; however, in cakes and cookies use ⅞ cup honey for one cup sugar and reduce the liquid by three tablesppons for each cup of honey used.

It is wise to use recipes that have been tested rather than to change your old recipes from sugar to honey; for acidity must be considered. If sour milk or sour cream is not called for in the recipe, you should add a pinch of baking soda to neutralize the acidity of the honey.

Your baked products will be better for your family if you reduce the calorie content. As the honey is twice as sweet, you can use less, also gram for gram, honey contains about ¾ as many calories as sugar. There are trace amounts of minerals and vitamins in honey, but they are such minimal amounts that they are not considered vital sources of these nutrients. You would add more nourishment to your baked products by using, for example, whole wheat flour, wheat germ, bran, dried fruits and nuts and skim milk powder.

Filets Are Timesavers

60-MINUTE GOURMET

By PIERRE FRANEY

In any broad concept of 60-minute cookery, gourmet style, it would be impossible to ignore some of the more expensive cuts of meat, for many of these most emphatically play an important role in what might be called the resources of the hasty cook.

Filet mignon does, of course, fit into this category. But one thing is apparent to me in shopping at the meat counter of a supermarket in my home town. There are times when this cut of beef can be quite reasonably priced, particularly when on special sale, as it often seems to be. There is a second, if obvious, thought, too. In any filet, be it red meat, chicken or fish, there is no waste.

Classically, a filet mignon with a madeira wine sauce is made with what is known as demi-glace, or a glace de viande. A demi-glace is a rich-bodied base, standard in professional kitchens, which requires many hours of simmering before straining. It congeals on cooling and can simply be introduced at the end of the preparation of a dish and does not require flour. A glace de viande is a demi-glace that has been reduced several hours longer and is rather firm in texture, like caramel candy. This serves a similar purpose, but only a dab of it stirred into a thin liquid will give body to the sauce without flour.

In that such sauces are rarely to be found in home kitchens, it is necessary to use some form of thickener to make a sauce.

The filet mignon with sauce madeira outlined here requires about 15 minutes cooking time, and the sauce is thickened using one teaspoon of flour for four servings. A combination of quickly sauteed vegetables is suggested as an accompaniment and the total cooking time for these is less than 10 minutes. Thus, to prepare this meal in less than an hour it is best to prepare the basic ingredients for the beef, the sauce and the vegetables, and then start to cook.

FILET MIGNON SAUCE MADEIRA

4 filets mignons, about half a pound each
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
¼ cup madeira wine
¾ cup fresh or canned beef broth
3 teaspoon butter
1 teaspoon flour
2 teaspoons chopped parsley.

1. Sprinkle the meat on both sides with salt and pepper. Heat the oil in a skillet and, when very hot, add the meat. Cook over high heat about five minutes. Cook longer if you want medium or well-done meat.
2. Turn the meat and continue cooking over high heat about five minutes. Or cook longer if you want medium or well-done meat. Remove the meat to a warm platter and keep warm. Pour off the fat from th skillet. Add the shallots.
3. Add the wine and cook over high heat about 30 seconds. Add the broth and bring to a full boil, stirring up to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the skillet. Add a little salt and pepper to taste.
4. Cook until reduced by half.
5. Meanwhile, blend two teaspoons of butter and flour in a small mixing bowl. Stir it into the simmering sauce and cook briefly.
6. Swirl in the remaining teaspoon butter. Strain the sauce over the meat and dot the centre of each filet with a dab of parsley. Serve immediately.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUTE OF VEGETABLES FERMIERE

½ pound carrots
⅓ pound white turnips
½ pound fresh mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
Chopped parsley.

1. Trim the carrots and cut into very thin slices. There should be about 1½ cups.
2. Trim the turnips and cut into very thin slices. There should be about 1½ cups.
3. Rinse and drain the mushrooms. Dry well. Slice thinly. There should be about three cups.
4. Heat the butter in a skillet and add the carrots and turnips. Sprinkle wuth salt and pepper. Cook, tossing and stirring, over high heat, about three mnutes.
5.Add the mushrooms and cook, tossing and stirring, about two minutes.
6. Add the shallots and toss. Serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Zucchini: Smaller Better

OTTAWA (CP) — Gardeners are warned to resist the temptation of growing zucchini to record lengths because larger might be bitter, rather than better.

Experts say optimal size is about six to eight inches long and two to three inches wide.

Shoppers should look for tender, slim zucchinis, free from soft spots and heavy. Store in the refrigerator and use within a week.

Prepare and cook zucchini as you would any other summer squash. For baking, cut zucchini in halves, leaving the skin on. Then bake 20 minutes at 325 degrees F.

"Another way to really savor the mild flavor and freshness of this vegetable is to pan it," say the consultants. "For this, melt one tablespoon of butter in a heavy frying pan and add the zucchini cut in one-quarter-inch slices. Sprinkle with salt, cover the pan and cook over gentle heat 10 minutes."

Canning is an economical way of preserving quality fruits and vegetables for times when they are scarce and more expensive.

The 32-page booklet Canning Canadian Fruits and Vegetables presents seven steps to successful canning and explains different canning procedures.

The booklet urges you not to can fruits and tomatoes that are underripe, overripe, bruised or spotted. Underripe fruits and tomatoes should be allowed to ripen in a warm place to develop their full flavor before you can them.

Directions on how to prepare and package vegetables for canning, various methods for canning fruit with or without sugar, as well as answers to many commonly asked questions about canning are included in the booklet.

Veteran Dancer Going Back to School

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

What's a young man of 27 with a winning stage personality, who can dance and act up a storm and whom many people are calling the star of the 1978 Smile Show, doing retiring from show business?

Gerry Gilbert-Gray smiles and says it's only commonsense. The young veteran of almost two decades of dancing around the world, says he was a drop-out from school and because he had no better than a Grade 10 education he asked himself where he could go on that if for any number of reasons he could no longer make it dancing.

So now the stage for Gerry is a second string. The Smile Show is summer employment that will help him foot the bill while he is a full-time political science student at Ontario's York University. However he doesn't believe that the Bachelor's degree he is seeking will be followed immediately by success in a new career.

"What I'll have then will be a lot of good theory," he says, "but at least it'll be a base I didn't have before; something I can build on."

Gerry feels universities have generally been viewed wrongly. " Thirty or so years ago, it began to be noticed that people coming out of university with a degree landed good jobs. So going to university was equated with getting a job; but that has turned out to be a false surmise. A degree is no guarantee of a well-paying professional job."

The trouble with university degrees, he feels, is that there are too many theorists and one becomes loaded down with theoretical knowledge that somehow has to be converted into practical terms before it can establish you as a wage-earner.

In general he would like to see community colleges given more money and universities return to their former role as centres of academic thought, philosophy and research. He sees the unemployment problem as not simply a question of there being no jobs; there are jobs, only people don't want to take them because they feel the jobs are below their educational standard, he says.

An alert intelligence has guided the Gilbert-Gray dancing feet as they traveled from country to country — he had circled the world before he was 20 — enriching his knowledge and sharpening his perception of people. In the process he garnered an elementary degree in French at the Sorbonne.

Born in Aberdeen, he learned the Highland dances at the age of eight with a renowned expert, Bobby Watson. Ballet came later at Canada's National Ballet School.

Gerry describes his Highland dancing as "very individual — I'm not in competition so certain things I do my own way."

When it's pointed out that such a statement would send the eyebrows of Highland dance purists shooting up into their hairlines, he retorts: "Then why do they admit girls to Highland dance competitions?"

The next question was, why not?

"It's completely outside tradition," he replies; "and as for girls in kilts — they turn me off. I find the Highland outfit very unappealing on girls. The kilt is right for a man's flat derriere; on a female shape it's all wrong. And look what the stockings do to a woman's legs!"

GILBERT-GRAY
. . . looking for a base

"Highland is an interpretive form of dance, something a lot of people fail to understand," he explains. "There is the Sean Triubhas, for example. The translation of that is to" shake off the trousers" which the Highlanders were forced into when wearing of the kilt was banned after Culloden — remember the shaking or flicking of the foot in that dance? It represents throwing off the Westminster shackles."

Gilbert-Gray was still in his teens when he was invited to join Les Feux Follets. When he was 17 he returned to Britain and despite the brevity of his experience in ballet, presented himself at an audition and was immediately engaged for the Scottish Theatre Ballet in Glasgow. "You always have to have a bit of brass neck — chutzpah — " he comments.

He says he loves his first experience of working in Victoria with the Smile Show. Bill and Sylvia Hosie are friends from the Feux Follets days and he has made lots of new ones among Victorians and the many visitors who come to the show in the Empress Hotel and often enjoy chatting with cast members.

He has performed in from 24 to 26 countries in the space of eight years and on stage and in televsion in Canada with the White Heather Show, University of Toronto Dance Company, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, Scottish Theatre Ballet, Rainbow Stage, A Scottish Fancy, the Tommy Hunter Show, White Cocade, Ed Sullivan, Glen Echoe Show, and the University of Toronto symposium, Canada and the Celtic Consciouness, among others.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Decision on a starting date for a preliminary hearing into a charge of conspiracy to import marijuana against 15 men has been delayed at least another week in Victoria provincial court.

The 15, arrested during a combined RCMP-armed forces sea swoop July 15 at Obstruction Island in Shelter Inlet, 35 kilometres northwest of Tofino, appeared Wednesday before Judge Blake Allan and were all remanded until next Wednesday for fixing of a preliminary date and, for all but four, election of their trial method.

The raid netted 13 tons of marijuana said to be worth $20.8 million wholesale.

Three of the accused men, 27-year-old Garth Clarence Sexton of Vancouver, 28-year-old Edwin Floyd Terry of Charlottesville, Virginia, and 34-year-old Frank Piersanti of Montreal, elected trial by judge and jury, an election made earlier by 33-year-old Robert Sherman Miller of North Vancouver.

Crown counsel Gordon MacDonald told the court he had been informed by Judge William Ostler, chief judge in the Victorial provincial court, that arrangements can be made for a special judge to hear the preliminary and that the hearing could take place during one week in October, two weeks in November and two weeks in December or it could begin next January.

Lawyer Lawrence Myers of Vancouver, speaking on behalf of all accused men represented by legal counsel, asked that all matters be remanded until next Wednesday.

Two men who had their bails raised Tuesday in a B.C. Supreme Court bail review launched by the Crown came into the courtroom from the jail area, which indicated they had not been able to perfect the bail yet.

Kevin Gerard Gushue, 26, of Surrey, had his bail increased from $7,000 to $20,000 by Mr. Justice J.G. Ruttan while 32-year-old Gordon Barlow Tait of North Vancouver had his bail raised from $10,000 to $30,000.

A defence appeal on a detention order for 35-year-old Frederick MacIntosh Tait of North Vancouver was dismissed by Ruttan.

THIS WAS A FAIR COP

DALLAS — The deputy U.S. marshal and the city policewoman both were undercover but he ended up in jail.

Authorities said the federal officer was arrested after he asked the policewoman, posing as a prostitute, for a date.

Officers said the deputy marshal was searching for a witness in the same area of Dallas as the policewoman, who was posing as a prostitute to make arrests for solicitation.

40-Year Romance Key to Roses

VANCOUVER — A 40-year-old love affair was the secret behind mystery roses tossed to Prince Philip and Prince Andrew by an unseen Vancouver admirer.

For Polish-born artist Eugenia Greinert the royal visit was a chance to demonstrate her "romantic adoration" of the monarchy that began in pre-war Warsaw when she was studying fine art.

Miss Greinert said Wednesday that she tossed three roses at the princes' in their yellow Rolls Royce for two reasons: to draw their attention for photographs needed for future portraits and to show her undying affection.

"Andrew picked up one of the red roses and smelled it and smiled — he's such a handsome young man," she said.

In her youth, Miss Greinert filled a suitcase with newspaper clippings and pictures of the British royal family.

She was forced to hide them during the Second World War fearing that she would be punished by the Nazis.

Soon after hostilities ended, she moved to France and in 1949 emigrated to Canada.

Her composition of the Queen's coronation today hangs in Armed Forces offices in Ottawa, and a portrait of Prince Philip hangs in the downtown Vancouver Club.

WARNER TRIES AGAIN

RICHMOND, Va. — Former U.S. Navy Secretary John Warner, the husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor, said Wednesday he will seek the Republican Senate nomination left vacant by the death last week of Richard Obenshain.

Warner told a news conference that supporters will place his name in nomination Saturday when the Virginia Republican Central Committee meets to pick a successor to Obenshain, who died in a private airplane crash returning from a campaign appearance.

Warner finished second in the race for the nomination behind Obenshain at the Virginia GOP convention earlier this year.

While followers of the conservative Obenshain believe Warner is too moderate, other Virginia Republicans believe he is the only candidate who can put together the money and organization to put on an effective campaign starting this late.

Polanski Working Again

PARIS — Film director Roman Polanski has started work on his first film since fleeing the United States early this year to avoid sentencing on a morals charge involving a 13-year-old girl with whom he was said to have had sexual relations after feeding her narcotics.

A spokesman said Polanski started work a week ago on Tess, an adaptation of the English classic Tess of the d'Urbervilles by Thomas Hardy.

GARDENING

Hot Days Hurt Plants

A week of relatively high day temperatures for the southern end of Vancouver Island causes some vegetable plants to react unfavorably.

This is not common to every garden because of the range of temperatures which prevail over the area.

Gardens located on low ground away from the ocean, where afternoon temperatures have been from 26 to 30 degrees Celsius or higher for the past week, have the plants which are puzzling their owners.

Each day an increasing number of gardeners are noticing the flowers on the Scarlet Runner bean plants are not setting pods. In some instances the blossoms have fallen and formed a "red carpet" that is not appreciated.

This is a common occurrence in all areas where late July and August are months of high temperatures, but it only happens occasionally here.

The last time blossom drop was a serious problem here was in 1958 when temperatures ranged from 27 to 34 (80 to 94 degrees Fahrenheit) in July and 2 to 29 in August.

Although average temperatures in England are not so high as we experience here, this problem with Scarlet Runners seems to be common, and English gardening books suggest that the crop be "sprayed with water after sundown" during warm periods.

When we try to follow this advice in our coastal gardens we run into another problem with more serious consequences.

The sharp temperature drop here as the cool sea air spreads over land areas in the early evening, together with overnight lows of 11 in the weatherscreen and 5 to 7 on the ground, provides ideal conditions for fungous diseases if the plant foliage is damp or wet at sundown.

Once mildew starts on the Scarlet Runners they are soon a sorry sight and are rarely able to come back into normal production when day temperatures drop later in the month.

It is much better to give the vines a light misting with water, especially over the flower clusters, three or four times during the morning and afternoon, so that the foliage is dry before sunset.

If the plants are kept in good condition they will flower and set beans in the usual way as soon as the temperatures drop to nearer normal.

Another problem is with tomato fruits. This happens every year in some districts unless the gardener is experienced and takes the necessary precautions.

It is sun-scald of the tomato fruits which are not adequately protected by the foliage. The fruits reach the pale green stage then develope a hard greenish-white area on the part exposed to strong sun.

This section, composed of damaged cells, fails to ripen and remains white and hard. The rest of the fruit can be enjoyed but a portion has to be discarded, something no gardener appreciates.

I prevent the scalding of fruits by draping loose weave sacking over the stakes, allowing free air circulation around the plants at soil level. Some gardeners have tried black polythene plastic and lost their plants because of the intense heat under the cover.

Three-ply sheets leaning against the stakes on the sunny side works well, but must be repositioned as the angle of the sun changes. Using two sheets as a tent is not so good as having one side open.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember. Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Garrison Funds Freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter lost a long-running battle Wednesday when the U.S. Senate voted down his request to keep funds for the Garrison diversion project frozen.

A resolution co-sponsored by North Dakota Senators Milton Young and Quentin Burdick passed the upper house without opposition.

It calls for an end to the freeze on the $17.7 million appropriated last year for the controversial North Dakota irrigation project.

"This requires them to spend the money," Young said. "Now they have to go ahead with construction."

President Carter had asked congress to defer spending the $17.7 million largely because of Canadian objections to the project. Under congressional rules, however, a majority of either house can override a presidential deferral request.

Young and Burdick had toned down their original resolution, and the version passed Wednesday allows for work to remain shut down on the Lonetree dam and reservoir for at least another year.

The Garrison project is to deliver Missouri River water to several semi-arid regions of North Dakota. The Lonetree reservoir is a key part of that delivery system.

Lonetree is also the main route for water to enter the Hudson Bay drainage basin. The governments of Canada and Manitoba fear a connection between the Hudson Bay and Missouri River systems would have disasterous implications for the Manitoba fishing industry.

The International Joint Commission confirmed these fears in a report to the U.S. and Canadian governments last year.

Wednesday's vote could bring pressure on the U.S. state department to get on with negotiations on possible changes in the project to protect Canadian interests.

Meanwhile, Burdick said he hoped work on portions of the project other than Lonetree would resume immediately after a halt in construction that has lasted more than a year.

Scientist Raises Mice Outside Womb

By VICTOR COHN
Washington Post

BALTIMORE — In a feat that could point the way to the growth of any mammal — including a human being — outside the womb, a scientist here is raising embryo mice in the laboratory until they are halfway through gestation and their heart cells begin beating.

The scientist is Dr. Yu-Chih Hsu of the Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health.

The mouse fetuses developing in plastic dishes in his laboratory are not yet complete test-tube babies.

"I don't know whether or not it will ever be possible" to bring a mouse or any other mammal, including a human, completely to "birth" or maturity outside the womb, he said last week.

"It might never be done. Or it might be done in the mouse by someone in a very short time.

"In the human being? I hope never. That is not necessary, and it raises too many ethical questions."

Still, Dr. Hsu has been recognized in scientific circles for an outstanding achievement in growing mamallian embryos to so advanced a stage.

If there is ever complete test-tube development of any creature, for good or for ill, he will be remembered for taking a long step on the way.

Hsu does not try to fertilize his mouse mothers' egg cells in his laboratory himself, the way Britain's Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards fertilized the egg cell that two weeks ago became baby Louise Brown.

Instead, he finds it easier — and cheaper, since he has little help and sparse funds — to remove normally fertilized embryos from mother mice at the day-and-a-half-old, two-cell stage, the stage where the fertilized egg has just divided.

Other scientists have fertilized mouse egg cells with mouse sperm successfully. After just a few days, they did successfully implant their embryos into mouse mothers.

Hsu says he does not consider either of these steps necessary to accomplish his main goal, which is simply to observe his embryos' development for as long as possible.

As long as possible means 11 or 12 days, which is just over half of a normal mouse's 19 days in the womb. It is the equivalent of nearly five months for a human fetus.

"We can't yet construct the maternal environment completely," he admitted. And no, he said, he does not really have "artificial wombs" in his laboratory, only standard laboratory Petri dishes a few inches across in which his little embryos grow. Still, they do grow.

Keeping embryonic development going for 11 or 12 days has been long enough for him to show that this mammalian embryo does not need to be attached to a mother to develop to a fairly advanced stage.

It has been long enough for him to refute the belief that contact with the uterus is needed before an embryo can start to "differentiate" into brain, spinal cord, heart and other specialized tissues.

Maturing a little more slowly than they would in the womb, his mice reach almost the halfway piont in their physical development.

One day, he said, he hopes science may be able to use trays of mouse embryos as a valuable and sensitive test system to learn whether new drugs or chemicals cause birth defects or cancers.

STRUTTING THEIR stuff, hundreds of youthful participants in area parks and playgrounds program marched Wednesday in huge parade through Beacon Hill park. Small fry, dressed in astonishingly imaginative costumes, played games, sang songs, won prizes and had a whoop-de-doo time. Organizers were happy they missed showers and cloudy skies. Fiery Display By Space Junk

Up to 50 incandescent chunks of cosmic debris an hour are expected to cut fiery trails through the earth's atmosphere beginning today and continuing until Monday.

Stretched out on the grass in a dark place is the best way to spot the meteorite shower, say the experts at the Dominion Astrophsical Observatory in Saanich.

Observant Victoria residents can expect to see 10 times the average number of meteorites fall over the five days, they say.

Most of the activity will take place in the northeast, but the burning balls of cosmic material will appear throughout the heavens at the rate of about five an hour.

The best night for meteorite watching should be Saturday, they say.

The celestial fireworks display is an annual event, staged every time the earth's orbit passes through a space-drifting junkyard that once travelled in the nucleus of a comet.

But this year, astronomers at New York City's Hayden Planetarium say the Thursday through Saturday show — in the vicinity of the north-eastern constellation Perseus — may carry a special double bill, featuring fireballs such as the one that blew up Aug. 2 over Wyoming.

New Company Springs Up To Move Beer Empties

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Some businesses may be shut down by the B.C. beer strike but at least one new one is springing up because of it.

Bill Allan of Allan Paper Stock Co. Ltd. said today he hopes to have a new company in operation next week to help move the mountain of import bottles and cans that have built up in Victoria hotels during the beer strike that's now entering its third month.

Allan said there's an estimated 100,000 dozen import empties in storage around the city "and that's a hell of a lot of empties."

Most bottle exchanges in the province have stopped taking empties because they can't get rid of them themselves and Allan said hotels are going frantic trying to find storage space.

"There's a real pile of imports out there. They're all jammed up in every nook and cranny. They've got them stored all over the place and a few people (hotel owners) have even taken them home to store in the basement."

He said that he's had well over 30 calls from hotels and restaurants this week, asking how they can get rid of their imports.

"The average hotel must have about 2,500 dozen and at least one has got about 10,000 dozen in storage."

Allan said the new operation, to be called U and I Bottle Recycling, will handle all import bottles and cans.

Olympia bottles will be shipped back to the U.S., but all other bottles will be crushed for recycling. Aluminum and steel cans will also be recycled.

"Hopefully we should be able to get the hotels cleaned up in about two weeks so they can breathe a little. Aside from the storage problem there's quite a smell with all that stale beer sitting around in the empties."

Allan said the new company will also buy import empties from individuals, but won't be accepting any local bottles from anyone.

Some, such as the Victoria Bottle Exchange, shut their doors soon after the strike hit to avoid buying bottles that couldn't be re-sold and getting stuck with storage bills.

Party Bottle, a Victoria company that buys empty beer bottles as well as selling full ones, may have to lay off some staff if the strike continues much longer.

Manager Al Guilbault said he's still buying empties but is hurting because he's keeping them in storage while the strike continues.

"I won't go belly-up but I may have to adjust to the situation by laying some people off. I may even have to look for work myself."

In Vancouver depot owners who buy empty beer bottles from the public say they may have to shut down completely, along with the agents who buy the bottles from them.

Dale Lyons, assistant manager of Allied Bottle Distributors Ltd., said Tuesday there are more than 300,000 dozen empties in his warehouse.

"It's killing us,"he said. "Most bottle depots are going belly-up with no money coming in. Something should be done about this because we'll go belly-up, too, if this (strike) keeps going.

"Our storage space is full now. We have about 100,000 dozen sitting outside and if it rains, we're in trouble."

He said depots have dropped the amount they pay for a dozen empties to 50 cents from 60 and agents will pay depots 60 cents a dozen, down from 66 cents.

Before the strike, empties from depots were bought by Pacific Brewers Distributors Ltd. Now, however, the company buys only imported beer empties, because its storage facilties are also filled, said general manager John Pickering.

Laurie Dyer, liquor distribution branch finance director, said, "The government cannot interfere without being classified as an ally" as long as the strike lasts.

The brewery shutdown began May 26 with a strike at the Carling O'Keefe brewery here. The strike was followed by lockouts at Labatt's, Molson's and Columbia breweries June 8.

Auto Importers Query Pricing of Soviet Car

TORONTO (CP) — Umberto Gabbi, managing director of Fiat Canada Ltd., said today importers are asking how the Russians can sell their Lada model car in Canada for $3,495 when it costs more than $8,000 in the Soviet Union.

Lada Cars of Canada Inc., based in Ajax, Ont., has announced it will sell the four-door, front-wheel drive subcompact for $3,495, fully equipped.

It would make the Lada one of the least-expensive cars in Canada. The slightly-smaller Fiat 128 four-door sedan carries a suggested list price of $4,295, while the larger Fiat 131 has a base price of $5,670.

"Fiat, like every other importer, is asking itself how is it possible that a car which sells in Russia for way over $8,000 can be imported and sold in Canada for an advertised price of $3,495," said Gabbi. "Especially, when you consider the extremely high tariff — 15 per cent — Canada imposes on imported cars."

However, Lada Canada president Peter Dennis rejects the implication that the cars are being "dumped" in Canada, that is sold at a price lower than its worth in the exporting country.

"All I know is that we're selling them at a price reasonably equivalent to what they're selling for in Britain — the $3,500 to $4,000 range."

Dennis said the lower cost is partly attributable to the size of the Lada factory which is reported able to produce one million cars a year.

"Also what's a Russian ruble worth? It may be listed at $1.30 on the foreign currency list but you can't take it in or out of the country and its true value is very hard to determine."

A senior official of the federal customs and excise branch said no complaints have been received and no anti-dumping investigation is being considered.

Dennis said about 10 dealers in Toronto and southern Ontario are ready to sell the new cars. The first shipment of 480 Ladas is expected to arrive in Montreal next week.

C'Wealth Meeting To Probe Economy

EDMONTON (CP) — Problems facing Canada's manufacturing sector, including little growth and accompanying unemployment, will likely be discussed at the fifth Commonwealth study conference scheduled to be held in Canada in 1980, Prince Philip said Wednesday.

But the issues, though of major importance, will probably be discussed informally only and no immediate solutions will follow, he added.

At a news briefing, Prince Philip, who will chair the 1980 conference, said the meetings are intended to give members of industrial management, trade unions and public service groups a bird's eye view of life in industrial communities.

At the 1980 meeting, delegates from other Commonwealth countries will form 14 groups, and each group will travel to different regions of the country to closely study community relations.

"So it's not just a sightseeing tour," said Prince Philip.

Attending the news conference with the prince were several members of the Canadian committee responsible for organizing the symposium including former Governor-General Roland Michener and Joe Morris, former president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Asked whether the 1980 conference, expected to cost $1½ million, would address the question of foreign ownership of Canadian manufacturing interests, Prince Philip replied: "It's not a question of who controls it, it's a question of what happens."

He said the conferences were never designed to investigate the economic relations of industry.

Replying to other questions, Prince Philip said although no public interest groups such as environmentalists are included in the Canadian organizing committee, many of the individuals who will be attending, such as business and labor leaders, are deeply interested in ecological issues.

DREDGER TELLS OF FIXED BIDS

TORONTO (CP) — A former president of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd. testified Wednesday that between 1959 and 1963 he was involved in bid-rigging with representatives of four companies on trial now for conspiracy to defraud public agencies.

John Francis Hamel, who retired as president of Canadian Dredge and Dock, said he had discussions on 10 or 12 occasions with representatives of McNamara Corp. Ltd., The J. P. Porter Co. Ltd., C. A. Pitts General Contractors Ltd. and Marine Industries Ltd.

He said the talks were aimed at agreeing on bids in return for consideration such as a subcontract on a job or payment of an amount of money.

QUADS' DAD GETS BONUS

TORONTO (CP) — Three boys of the quadruplets born to Maria and Giuseppe Denardo were in fair condition Wednesday and the fourth, a girl, was moved to the serious list from the critical, said a spokesman for the Hospital for Sick Children.

No Offence Taken: Queen

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's chief protocol officer says Queen Elizabeth sent a special message to Premier Peter Lougheed advising him that his actions during the Queen's tour of Alberta were not offensive.

Protocol officer John Whalley said Wednesday that during the royal tour Sir Philip Moore, the Queen's private secretary, "asked me to advise the premier that Her Majesty wished it to be known that there was no offence taken at any of his actions."

During the tour, members of the British news media criticized Lougheed for introducing himself to people and shaking their hands while he was accompanying the Queen on visits to provincial centres.

The British media was especially critical of Lougheed after he stood up in an automobile to wave to crowds who were watching the Queen as she and Prince Philip waved from a car travelling in front of the premier.

Whalley said Lougheed did not intend to comment on the complaints that he had broken protocol with his actions.

"I think the premier realized that certain media are inclined to take cheap shots at everybody and think this makes news . . . rather than saying everything went beautifully and it was a lovely day," Whalley said.

Meanwhile, Lougheed said Tuesday that whatever happens in current federal government efforts to change the British North America Act, Canada's official charter, the Queen must not lose any of her power.

Bus Victims Mourned

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Representatives of Quebec's political parties and the province's lieutenant-governor will join 9,000 residents of this Eastern Townships mining community at funeral services today for 36 victims of Canada's worst bus accident.

Another 10,000 visitors are expected to line a 6.5-kilometre-long motorcade route to pay their last respects to the victims, who drowned Friday night when an excursion bus plunged into a lake near Eastman, Que. Only seven of the 47 aboard survived.

But the huge Canadian Johns-Manville Corp., the town's largest employer, said it would continue production today despite the funeral.

Yvon Hamel, an Asbestos municipal official, said it would cost the company "too much" to shut down its open-pit asbestos mine — the largest in the world — and to restart operations a few hours later. The mine normally operates 24 hours a day.

Hamel said in an interview Wednesday that 27 of the dead were mentally or physically handicapped. Previous reports said 26 were handicapped. Another 13 volunteers and friends with the group perished.

Four other victims were buried in nearby Danville Tuesday following a service attended by some 2,200 people. A fifth victim, 31-year-old Gerard Duford, will be buried today, but his parents placed his body in a private funeral home.

DIET DRINK INVESTIGATED

OTTAWA (CP) - The government is investigating a diet aid drink put under seizure two weeks ago because of advertising claims it promotes rapid weight loss.

Ross Dunn, of the consumer fraud protection branch, says the department is particularly concerned about the labelling on Thera-Slim 100 and the safety of the diet consumers may follow.

"There was some worry that unless a doctor was intimately involved with the diet, it could lead to some health problems," Dunn said in an interview.

The manufacturers, Dominion Pharmacals, a division of Mail Store Ltd. of Rexdale, Ont., claim consumers can lose as much as six pounds after three glasses of the drink.

"Lose up to 14 pounds after just seven glassfuls more, and that's just the beginning," an advertisement says.

A federal health spokesman said the department is also concerned about advertising claims related to product safety.

"Whenever a manufacturer starts claiming a product can do something, that claim has to be backed with laboratory tests," the health department spokesman said.

Dunn said the manufacturer has already volunteered to change the labels and that further investigation will be completed by the health department.

The federal health protection branch has the authority to prohibit the sale or use of products in Canada when there is reasonable belief that federal regulations on food, drugs, cosmetics, medical devices and radiation emitting devices have been violated.

A recent report listed 51 seizures in the first three months of 1978 valued at more than $30,000.

There were five convictions with fines totalling $2,800, 32 products were recalled and 52 products were refused entry into the country.

Among the convictions was Jubilee Beverages Ltd., of Red Deer, Alta., fined $1,200 because two products, Pepsi Cola soft drink and 7-Up soft drink, were manufactured under unsanitary conditions and contained mould and rodent hairs.

Senators Fear 'Water-Boy' Role

OTTAWA (CP)- Bitterness crept into discussions on the constitution Wednesday as a Senate committee dealt with a government proposal that would make the Senate obsolete.

Senators expressed anger and hurt at Prime Minister's Trudeau's plan to replace the existing Senate with a new Upper House called the House of the Federation.

In place of the 104-member body, the government would substitute a 118-member body, with half its members to be selected by the federal government and half by the provincial governments.

Unlike the existing Senate, the new House of the Federation would have strict provincial quotas to make sure all regions of the country are represented.

Senator Hazen Argue (L-Sask.) said the proposal would turn the Upper House into nothing more than "a bunch of mere water boys" for provincial governments.

The most poignant remarks of the day came from Senator Azellus Denis (L-Que.) who wondered if the government might not consider letting all the present senators either die or retire before putting into effect its new selection scheme.

Denis, who served as postmaster-general in the Pearson administration, has four years left until he reaches the Senate's mandatory retirement age of 75.

"If the Senate is abolished, I am sure they will give us generous compensation, but they will also have to pay the members," he said.

"Why don't they just keep dozens of good senators with experience — I am not included in that list — and appoint the new ones in 10 or 15 years when we'll all be gone away? That way everyone would be happy."

The Senate committee, which has been meeting for the last two weeks to study Trudeau's constititional reform proposals, carefully skirted the House of the Federation plan in its discussions until Wednesday.

Guyanese Boycott Reception

EDMONTON (CP) — About eight Guyanese citizens walked out of a reception honoring their athletes Wednesday night to protest internal Guyanese politics.

The walkout prompted a brief shouting match outside a reception room at a downtown hotel but was quickly broken up.

Zamal Odeen, a Guyanese student at the University of Alberta, said the walkout was called to protest the "rigging of the electoral process" in recent elections there.

KILLING BY POLICEMAN PROTESTED

TORONTO (CP) — About 30 persons held a protest outside a courtroom Wednesday when a man whose brother was shot and killed by Metropolitan Toronto police earlier in the day was brought to court.

The demonstrators, many of whom yelled obscenities at about 10 policemen trying to control the crowd, shouted expressions of support for Preston Mitchell Evans, 19, of Toronto, charged with possession of a dangerous weapon.

Two women were arrested outside the courtroom and charged with causing a disturbance.

Police said the incident at the discotheque occurred when Preston Evans went to the place to settle accounts with the doorman who had ejected him earlier in the week.

Constable Clark was called to the scene by an employee who said the doorman was being threatened by a man with a knife. When the constable tried to arrest the man with the knife, a second man intervened and kicked the constable, police said.

Police said Andrew Wesley Evans was to appear in court Aug. 11 after being charged last February with assaulting police and causing mischief to private property.

He was on bail after being charged in June with indecent assault of a female and forcible confinement of a female, police said.

VSO Gets $10,000 More Despite Region's Critics

The Victoria Symphony Society will get another $10,000 from the Capital Regional District.

This is in addition to $53,000 granted earlier this year to help offset an estimated $107,000 deficit.

The regional board on Wednesday, however, voted to ask the society's executive to have an independant appraisal made of the society's operation.

Director Bill Tindall said he thought the provincial government would be willing to grant the $5,000 to $7,000 needed for such an appraisal.

Earlier in the meeting the board had been told the regional district had been stymied in its attempt to take over from the intermunicipal committee the right to give grants because Oak Bay, Victoria, Sidney, Central Saanich and North Saanich had voted against such a move.

Director John Mika, in a long speech, led the move to have the extra $10,000 granted to the society. He said it was imperative at this time to support the symphony, which had helped bring about a flowering of other such cultural activities.

He said the extra grant would be in the nature of a gesture for one year only and reminded directors efforts are being made to expand Victoria's economic base by building a cultural arts and convention centre.

Director Art Young said he was going to vote against the extra grant. He felt the refusal to give the regional district grant-giving authority made it immoral to give any more money away.

Campbell said he was prepared to accept some responsibilty to the symphony for this time only. "Then I am inclined to say that will be the end of it. There will be no more consideration of grants by the regional board for any other purposes unless our support is actively sought by the municipalities."

REGION EYEING GROWTH

The Capital Regional Board executive committee will consider taking over the Greater Victoria Water Board, the Greater Victoria Public Library, grant distribition and possibly other functions considered regional in concept.

The suggestion came Wednesday from director John Mika of Saanich, even though five municipalities have vetoed the regional board extending its powers to include handling of grants.

Mika said municipalities should be given a "package approach," adding the water board is owned by a minority of users in the region and the library is "rapidly getting into a jackpot".

Bubble Going to Pop?

Two proposed tennis bubbles in Saanich are vying for provincial funding and one is likely to be financially deflated.

But Saanich council apparently has few qualms that an application for a one-third provincial grant from the Racquet Club will harm its own chances of a grant for a similar project which the municipality plans to build adjacent to the Cedar Hill Community Centre.

Council this week formally endorsed the Racquet Club's application. (Any agency applying for assistance from the province's Community Recreation Facilities Fund requires prior municipal approval).

Commented Ald. David Paterson: "This may take it out of our hands and let them (the provincial government) decide which is the better proposal."

Saanich has already awarded the contract for its $250,000 four-court tennis structure.

Ald. Ian Cass said it should be made clear to the club that there is a duplication of facilities involved in the two projects, in case there is any subsequent suggestion of "under-the-counter competition."

No-Tender Suggestion Shot Down on Ethics

The Capital Regional District's executive committee was defeated Wednesday in an attempt to award a $690,275 contract to Wheaton Construction Ltd. without calling tenders.

The committee wanted to enter into a client-architect agreement and construction contract for renovations to the regional district's existing Yates Street building and the newly-acquired adjacent building at 534 Yates.

Executive director Dennis Young said the construction company had examined the building and given an estimate for costs without having to include a cushion for hidden costs.

The route proposed by the committee, Young said, would also save money because work could begin in time to apply for funds from the Municipal Financial Authority's fall debenture issue, cutting out the need for interim financing.

Board chairman Jim Campbell pointed out that the regional district had gone this particular route (without going to tender) for the Sooke Recreation Centre and the Panorama Recreation Centre.

Director John Mika, however, said "public confidence is a little sensitive on regional board matters," making the committee's proposal unacceptable.

Director Bill Tindall said he had been over the building and isn't convinced the concern over hidden costs is justified.

John Hayes, an alternate director for the city, was concerned the regional district is moving into a new building when a provincial government study group is about to make recommendations on the future of regional districts. He thought the move might be premature.

Campbell told him the decision to buy the building and renovate it had already been made.

SAANICH TO BUY 'TRADE' BACK

Saanich will buy back for $61,000 three lots at Douglas and Cameo which the municipality traded with a development partnership last year, Mayor Mel Couvelier announced Wednesday.

The in-camera decision was made following Tuesday night's council meeting.

The developers, Wedgewood Enterprises, had given Saanich land at Christmas Hill in exchange for the Cameo property, on which it was planning residential development.

But municipal approval of the project was stalled in a conflict between Saanich and the provincial highways ministry over a proposed major traffic link between Patricia Bay Highway and north Quadra.

Spokesmen for the realty firm Douglas Hawkes Ltd. and Chew Excavating, which have financial interests in Wedgewood, recently asked council to re-purchase the land unless it could give immediate permission to develop the lots.

CAIRO (AP) — Canada will help finance Egypt's electricity projects with a loan of $25 million under an agreement signed Tuesday by the two countries. The loan will be repaid in bi-annual installments over 50 years, including a 10-year grace period, the Middle East news agency said.

Jordan River Fire Out of Control

THE BYRDS
ARE THE EGGS FRESH?
YOU KIDDIN'? THE CHICKEN'S STILL CRYING!
BODEWALT

A forest fire 12 kilometers north of Jordan River has spread to 50 acres and is blazing out of control, a provincial forest ranger said today.

Waterbombers and helicopters are battling the inferno from the air while 35 men and heavy equipment attempt to halt its movement on the ground, the spokesman said.

The fire had covered about half an acre when reported Tuesday about one mile west of Diversion Reservoir.

Aided by fanning winds, it had ripped through more than 12 acres by Wednesday evening.

Lower temperatures today are helping to cool things off, the ranger said.

But he said a fog bank moving in off the ocean is hindering the operation of the aircraft.

Meanwhile a threat of a new outbreak of forest fires in B.C. started by lightning storms has become a major worry for firefighters, a forests ministry spokesman said Wednesday.

Don Owen, director of forest protection, said 597 fires were burning Wednesday, 50 of them started in the previous 24 hours.

A lightning storm Tuesday night in north-central B.C. touched off at least 19 new fires and brought with it only a trace of rain.

"We have seen hundreds of new fires started up by a single lightning storm hitting across southern B.C.," said Owen.

He said that although about 2,000 firefighters were keeping the over-all fire situation under reasonable control, there appears to be no immediate relief in site with hot and dry weather forecast.

Bob Gibbs, Kamloops forest district officer, said new lightning storms could touch off many fires in area forests which have received no rain since July 16.

"Fires near populated areas are not difficult to fight because there are access roads and because men and equipment from the towns can be brought to fight the fire quickly."

Firefighters were reported Wednesday to have contained a fire about 45 kilometres west of Parksville.

Walt Schultz, assistant district fire ranger, said crews had succeeded in containing the fire to 1,500 acres from 2,000 acres but rain will be needed to snuff it out.

Officials set last weekend's firefighting bill at $1.7 million and estimated the total cost of fighting fires so far this summer at about $9 million.

REALLY A GRANNY

CHICAGO (UPI) — A mystery mummy found in a mass tomb of Egyptian kings and queens nearly 100 years ago has been identified as King Tutankhamen's grandmother.

LEVESQUE GOES ALONG

Premiers Unite Against Trudeau

REGINA (CP) — Provincial premiers formally united today in opposition to Prime Minister Trudeau's latest proposals for constitutional reform.

In a communique issued at the end of a two-day meeting, the 10 provincial leaders described as unworkable Trudeau's plans to replace the senate with a house of the federation.

They also closed ranks against federal suggestions to make the governor-general the head of state whenever the Queen is not in Canada.

Provincial accords against Trudeau's constitutional proposals had been expected throughout the conference and the final communique issued by the premiers contained few surprises.

"Quebec said that, while committed to its option of sovereignty-association, it could generally go along with the 1976 consensus and most of the other constitutional points raised in Regina.

"Quebec went on to state that this approach falls within the mandate of the Quebec government to reinforce provincial rights within the present system and also illustrates some of the minimal changes required to make the federal system a serious alternative in the forthcoming Quebec referedum."

Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry suggested that Quebec insert the section to protect itself in future should voters in that province reject the Parti Quebecois proposal for an independent Quebec.

Elsewhere in the communique, the premiers agreed that the question of dividing powers between the federal and provincial governments is "the key issue in constitutional reform."

They rejected Trudeau's suggestions that power-sharing arrangements be delayed for a year while the federal government moves ahead on

Someone Pulled The Plug

RETFORD, England (AP) — Citizens of this little Midlands market town woke up Thursday to find a mile and a half of their 200-year-old canal had disappeared.

Someone had pulled the plug out.

Police called in to investigate found that workmen dredging the canal had pulled up a heavy iron chain along with an assortment of rusty bicycles, baby carriages and bedsteds.

They yanked on the chain—and up came a giant wooden plug. The water slowly gurgled down the plughole and into the nearby River Idle.

"We're having a new plug made so we can refill the canal," said a police spokesman.

The plug may have been there since the canal was cut in 1777, said a spokesman for the British Waterways Authority, which is responsible for looking after Britain's canal network.

"We hope to have the stretch filled with water again in a couple of days. Luckily there is plenty of water in other stretches—provided the plugs are left alone."

SLIMMING THE FAT BIG ENERGY-SAVER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Journal of Public Health says if every fat American slimmed down to an ideal weight, the U.S. would save the energy equivalent of 1.3 billion gallons of gasoline.

Once the people completed their diets and stayed slim, the energy saved each year could run nearly one million cars, the journal said in its August issue.

Authors Bruce M. Hannon and Timothy G. Lohman said they reached that conclusion by estimating the number of overweight people, the average degree of overweight, and the amount of energy that goes into producing, marketing and cooking food.

If translated into the electricity demands of big cities, the energy saving from dieting Americans would meet the electricity needs of Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., all rolled into one, the article said.

They calculated the total adult excess weight in the nation is 2.3 billion pounds. They assumed the average dieter would try to cut his meals down by around 600 calories a day. They estimated how long it would take for the people to reach something like ideal weight and maintain it.

Then the authors consulted two studies for estimating the energy that goes into food production: one study calculating the energy per calorie used in planting, harvesting, processing, marketing and cooking food; the other study estimating the percentage of U.S. energy requirements tied up in food production and consumption.

CAZADERO, Calif. (UPI) — A violent forest fire raged out of control in a resort area north of San Francisco today, burning homes and sending vacationers fleeing from the flames that raced across the tops of redwood and pine trees.

All telephone lines to the community of Cazadero were cut and officials prepared for a total evacuation of the area.

Israel Pushes Peace Pact

Times News Services

Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today Israel will do "anything possible" to reach agreement with Egypt at next month's peace summit called by President Carter.

"We want at Camp David an agreement," Begin said after a 2½-hour cabinet meeting in Jerusalem.

"We shall do anything possible from our point of view to reach such an agreement," Begin said before resuming his first vacation since taking office more than a year ago.

The cabinet, called to order to hear a report on the meeting between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at Alexandria, Egypt, made no decisions today.

But Begin said some decisions will be necessary to prepare for the Sept. 5 meeting at Carter's Maryland mountain retreat.

Meanwhile, Eygyptian foreign ministry officials say their country plans a diplomatic campaign to explain to fellow Arabs why Sadat agreed to attend the summit.

They said Sadat accepted Carter's invitation to the Sept. 5 meeting because new elements were introduced into the deadlocked Middle East peace-seeking process.

One important element, the Al-Gomhouria newspaper said today, was a U.S. pledge to become a "full partner" in the negotiations. The other was the idea of the unprecedented three-way summit itself.

Stuck In Mud, Ignored

EDMONTON (CP) — A 68-year-old man was stuck on a mud bank of the North Saskatchewan River for two days before he was rescued.

Police said scores of people walked or cycled past Gregory Kologyczuk, marooned near a park's pedestrian bridge, without going to his aid.

He was finally spotted by a passer-by Tuesday night. Five policemen eventually hauled him up a four-metre embankment and sent him to hospital, where he was later released.

Police said Kologyczuk was walking along the bank of the river when he slipped down the steep embankment.

Steve Koenig, one of the police constables who rescued Kologyczuk said at first, they thought they were picking up a body. The man was covered with mud, his hands swollen and his head caked with dried mud.

"I splashed some water on his face to revive him and he came to life," Koenig said.

Pot Worth Risk for Cancer Patients

VANCOUVER (CP) — Many persons being treated for cancer in B.C. are ignoring the law and smoking marijuana because they say the drug controls nausea caused by anti-cancer drugs.

Some patients say marijuana controls nausea better than conventional anti-nausea drugs. And some doctors say they feel the patient's chances of recovery are improved because they are stronger and respond better to treatment if they are not always nauseated.

But unless Ottawa approves a two-year-old application from several Vancouver doctors to do a controlled study of marijuana with volunteer patients, the actual medical value of the drug might not be determined for some time, doctors say.

Meanwhile, patients continue to risk a criminal record and pay high black-market prices for the illegal medication of unknown potency and purity.

Patricia Isert, 37, a housewife in Coquitlam, about 30 kilometres east of here, says she uses the drug and allowed her name to be published although it could result in criminal charges being laid against her.

"I'm willing to take the risk," she said, "just like I was taking a risk when I used it (marijuana)."

A non-smoking mother of two, with no history of drug use, she says she used marijuana many times to relieve severe nausea induced by chemotherapy for Hodgkin's disease.

She said the life of a cancer victim under treatment is a dismal one.

"It's not a pleasant business and to have nausea on top of it . . . to have something to prevent it and not use it, is just criminal."

Mrs. Isert said she has not used marijuana except when she was receiving cancer drugs. She said she has not used it recently after her doctors prescribed a drug to which she does not react so violently.

A 67-year-old grandmother said she obtained some marijuana from her grandchildren. They assured her that she would not get high, but merely relaxed.

The drug helped her sleep soundly despite the pain from a tumor, she said, and eliminated persistent nausea.

Mrs. Isert's doctor, Kenneth Swenerton, an internal medicine specialist, said there are hundreds of cancer patients in B.C. using marijuana to combat nausea.

New Polio Case in Ont.

Times News Services

Two more Ontario residents were confirmed Wednesday as victims of polio, bringing to six the number of Canadian cases confirmed through laboratory tests.

An Ontario health ministry official said one other case of polio has been clinically diagnosed, but not confirmed by laboratory tests. That victim is in hospital.

Three families are in isolation in their farm homes near Lethbridge after some members developed flu-like symptoms which health officials suspect could be early signs of polio.

A spokesman for the Barons-Eureka Health Unit north of Lethbridge said Wednesday the families are members of a conservative faction of the Netherlands Reformed Congregation. The group views vaccinations as human interference in the will of God.

An eight-year-old boy living north of Lethbridge, the only confirmed polio case in the Lethbridge area, belongs to the same church.

Tests in B.C. have confirmed paralytic polio in Jake Van de Pol, a 25-year-old mushroom farmer from Chilliwack, who health officials said contracted the disease from a 17-year-old cousin visiting from the Netherlands.

The latest confirmed cases in Ontario, all in Oxford County and adjacent Norfolk County, bring the province's total to four.

In Calgary, Dr. David Hosking, city medical health officer, said adult immunization has been suspended because of dwindling supplies. He said the city's available supply must be reserved for children.

Earlier Wednesday, health officials in B.C., Alberta and Ontario said there was plenty of vaccine for persons who have not been immunized if they do not overreact.

In Toronto, a spokesman for Connaught Laboratories Ltd., Canada's major supplier of polio vaccine, said city residents are on an unnecessary binge for immunization.

He said there is no immediate shortage of Salk or Sabin vaccine, but if the demand continues, a shortage would occur.

The spokesman emphasized that there is no need for alarm.

"There are something like a half a dozen cases across the country of 22 million people. That's hardly being out of control."

SOCKEYE CLOSURE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian and United States convention waters will be closed for sockeye salmon fishing for the rest of the week to increase the escapement of spawners, the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission has decided.

The commission will meet again Friday to assess the situation and assign fishing dates for next week.

Premiers Close Ranks On Constitution Issue

The premiers said they looked forward to an October situational conference with Trudeau. They said it should be open to the public and asked that it deal with a range of constitutional-reform proposals—not just those issued by the prime minister.

At a news conference, Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan, acting as the spokesman for the provincial leaders, said the premiers "firmly believe" that both levels of government should come to agreement before any major constitutional reforms are made.

"It is doubtful whether the federal government has the legal authority to proceed unilaterally with proposed changes to the senate and the role of the monarchy," the communique said.

"In any event, it would clearly be wrong for them to undertake unilateral action in those or other important areay without provincial support."

As expected, the premiers opposed Trudeau's proposals to rewrite the constitution—the 111-year-old British North America Act—during the next three years.

"A fixed and rigid timetable is unrealistic and does nothing to contribute to the harmony and goodwill necessary to complete a process of constiutional review," the communique said.

—Federal-provincial consultation on judicial appointments.

Blakeney said not all premiers supported in principle Trudeau's proposals to enshrine certain basic rights in the constitjtion.

GARBAGE MOUNTAIN

It's hardly a new tourist attraction but people were taking pictures of it there on the Causeway near the statue of Capt. Cook.

It looked remarkably like a pile of garbage.

"I've never seen anything like it in my life," Empress manager Ted Balderson said today.

"The garbage was in green bags and it was piled so high it was a mountain."

Balderson has already protested to city council on behalf of both the Empress and the Visitors Information Centre about what he calls an inadequate clean-up service.

Protests have also come from the Victoria Attractions Association, the Downtown Victoria Association, Victoria Chamber of Commerce and various Causeway merchants.

Balderson said litter is a daily problem on the Causeway, due in part to the many hawkers selling popcorn, ice cream and sausages there. But it reached a peak on the holiday weekend.

"Monday night was the worst I've seen it. I don't know where all the garbage bags came from but I noticed it overflowing the containers by 6 p.m. and by 8:30 there was a real mountain.

"People who have been to Victoria before ask us what has happened to the city," one tourist counsellor said.

"They have always thought of Victoria as a clean city but now it is dirty and messy in the Causeway area. People coming in on boats have also complained to us. The first thing they notice is the litter in the Welcome to Victoria flowerbed."

Dollar Firmer, Gold Price Slips

LONDON (AP) — The value of the U.S. dollar firmed up slightly against European currencies today and dipped slightly against the Japanese yen as gold prices dropped back from record highs.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 187.25 yen, down slightly from Wednesday's close of 187.60 yen. Trading was moderate with volume estimated at $412 million, down about $100 million from recent levels.

The five major gold traders in London set the mid-morning price of the metal at $205.85, down from Wednesday's record closing high of $207.25. Wednesday morning's fixing price was a record high $208 in London.

One-Man Strike Pays Off Well

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A one-man strike, which for nearly three weeks shut down a metals plant employing 300 people, ended Wednesday when the lone Teamster member settled for more money than he originally sought.

But about 300 other workers represented by the United Steelworkers would not cross the picket line that sometimes included about a half-dozen other Teamsters, none of whom were Hussey employees.

McDonough went on strike when the company did not meet his demands for a 60-cent raise from his salary of $6.90 in a three-year contract. The company offered 10 cents.

Ogg said the new agreement calls for a 65-cent-an-hour increase, plus a cost-of-living adjustment of 19 cents.

STAND TAKEN

VIENNA (AP) — The Romanian Communist party said Tuesday it would not accept the position of being "on the side of one socialist country against another," an apparent reference to China and the Soviet Union. The party stand, published in a newspaper, came a day after Romanian party leader Nicolae Ceausescu returned from a meeting with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and a week before a visit to Romania by Chinese leader Hua Kuofeng.

Gliding: The High That Tops All Highs

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

HANG glider pilots on gull-shaped wings circled above Grouse Mountain trying to catch elusive wind currents and forget their mortality for a while.

Earthbound fans lazed on the grass of Paradise Bowl idly listening to rock bands, tossing frisbees and enjoying the beer garden as the gliders floated overhead like brightly colored butterflies.

The occasion was a combination rock concert and the four-day Canadian International Hang Gliding Championships which all took place on the B.C. Day weekend.

Australians Steve Moyes and John Ogden captured the top two spots. British Columbian John Duthie came in third, beating out professionals from the U.S., England, Scotland and Venezuela.

The kites, which ranged from the very plain to airbrushed works of art, cost between $900 and $1,500 each.

Added to that basic price tag is another $400 for harness and parachute plus $300 for wind-monitoring and other equipment.

"Gliders look more like little sail planes each year. In the early days they looked more like pointy parachutes," explained Peter Brock, a competitor who has been designing kites since the sport started five years ago in California.

In the beginning glider pilots were daredevils who jumped off cliffs, hoped for the best and rarely managed to stay airborne more than a few minutes.

Today's pilot must be a master strategist, a meteorology expert and possess a great deal of finesse to stay competitive.

Like the mythical Greek Icarus, who met his fate while soaring towards the sun on man-made wings, glider pilots have a sometimes-fatal fascination for gliding 50 pounds of aluminum and plastic to incredible heights.

Gliders have also reached heights of 10,000 feet and stayed up 11 hours by riding thermals which are rising columns of warm air.

In the words of Dean Tanji, another California pilot: "When you look down at all those snow-covered peaks and forests, it puts you in a place no one has ever been. There's no other feeling quite like it."

●

Professional hang glider pilots from the world championships held on Grouse Mountain last weekend will compete on Salt Spring Island Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

About 60 pilots and gliders are expected to attend the meet, sponsored by the Victoria Hang Gliding Club.

Library Proposal Jolted But Alive

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said today he may exercise his mayoral privilege in referring back to council the proposal to relocate the central library, which aldermen threw out by a 4-3 margin Wednesday night.

Young said his decision to bring up the matter again will depend on what happens tonight when Victoria city council decides whether to support the proposed lease of new library quarters in the provincial government building on Broughton.

Oak Bay and Saanich have already approved the move, and city council is expected to do likewise.

Young said he believes Esquimalt owes it to the other municipalities — its partners in ownership of the Greater Victoria library system — to reconsider.

"But on the strength of the arguments raised last night I can't see anyone changing their minds," he added.

The majority of Esquimalt aldermen made clear their preference to own a building rather than sign a 10-year lease with the provincial government.

Ald. Larry Mann, Esquimalt's representative on the library board, surprised some of his council colleagues by joining those opposed to the rental agreement.

He said there is a federal grant available for library construction, and also suggested the library should come under the Capital Region District so people from outside Greater Victoria who use the library will help pay for it.

Mayor Young favored the move, saying it is the last opportunity to get a new central library.

"We have a responsibility to the city as a whole. We haven't got any major costs compared to Oak Bay and Saanich," Young said.

"Saying we don't need a good central library is like saying the dockyard doesn't need Ottawa."

Ald. Barry Gilbert urged council to think about the taxpayers.

He said there is too much uncertainty about the cost of the new Urban Transit Authority Act, the new hospital and rising property taxes.

Ald. Jim McEvay said it is a motherhood issue: "We all like to own our own homes, but it is an excellent location with parking and there is no other alternative."

MAN GIVES LIFE FOR GIRLFRIEND

A 23-year-old man who pushed his girlfriend out of the path of a camper truck only to be struck down himself died Wednesday afternoon in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Michael Bouchard of 58-3498 Lovat was hit Saturday afternoon as he and his girlfriend Heather Pringle, 21, were leaving a house at 3103 Balfour.

Police said Bouchard, who saw the truck swerve down the street and over the boulevard, pushed Miss Pringle out of the way but couldn't jump clear himself.

He was knocked 50 feet through the air over a fence into a neighbor's yard. The truck smashed into a corner of the house, causing an estimated $18,000 damage.

3 Held After Raid

Two youths and a woman are in custody after Colwood RCMP raided a unit at Craigflower Motel late Wednesday night and recovered about $7,000 worth of coins, jewelry and cash stolen in weekend break-ins in View Royal.

The trio was expected to appear in provincial court later today charged with possession of stolen property.

Arabs, Americans Eye Sidney Island

An Arabian company and three wealthy Americans have shown an active interest in buying Sidney Island, three kilometres east of Sidney, co-owner Jack Todd said today.

"But it is such a beautiful place we hope and pray the provincial government will make an offer so it can be turned into a park."

Todd, a Victoria man, owns nine shares and former Victoria mayor Dick Wilson owns the other share of the property.

An agent for Arabian interests said he will be in the Victoria area soon, as early as next week, to view the eight-kilometre-long island with 20 kilometres of coastline.

Asking price is $3.7 million.

For sale is all of the island except 200 acres in the Sidney Spit area, which is a provincial park. The remaining area is 1,783 acres which contains a house and a sheep farm.

Todd said the island once belonged to George Courtenay but he sold it to a Victoria syndicate in 1909, retaining the northern 200 acres which eventually became a park.

In 1958 the remaining members of the syndicate were about to sell out to a Los Angeles group when Todd, who had a small interest, bought a larger share to keep ownership in Canada.

"Since 1958 we have built up the wildlife on the island and now there is a very large deer population along with squirrels and chipmunks."

He said birds are in abundance and it is a major stop for many on their migrations.

"We have offered it for sale but we hope the right people buy it, not the wrong people," he said.

The sale is being handled by James Park of Pemberton Holmes Ltd., which received inquiries from three Los Angeles interests and from an Eastern Canada man who is looking at a possible development for the island.

Some people have also inquired from Vancouver.

Brochures on the island have been distributed in several countries.

The sale price includes sheep, a house and farm machinery.

Well, Back To the Gloomies

For the first time in weeks, it won't be bikini weather in Greater Victoria this weekend.

Weatherman Norm Dressler said today the heat-wave has disappeared for at least a few days, to be replaced by cooler, cloudy and occasionally wet weather.

Widely scattered showers throughout the area today did little more than settle the dust, although Dressler reported a "good sprinkle" at the airport this morning.

It was the first rain since the electrical storm July 26.

Another low-pressure system expected to move in Friday will bring more of the same, and the forecast for the weekend is occasional rain Saturday tapering off to showers on Sunday.

Victoria's high temperature for Wednesday was 25, compared with Tuesday's high of 31.

Tips Given on Tots' Eating Habits

Food for Thought

By DR. JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

Virtually all parents have at least one worry in common: Are their children getting enough of the right foods to eat? And there's some justification for their concern. Nutritionally speaking, the preschool years are very important.

To make life easier for parents, we have reviewed some of their common worries, and we offer the following tips:

—"My 2-year-old seems to be eating less." This alarms many parents, especially those who are new to the game. However, changes in appetite are to be expected. During the first year of life, the average baby gains about 16 pounds and grows 10 inches. Such rapid growth requires a lot of calories and nutrients. In contrast, a 2- to 6-year-old usually grows no more than two or three inches a year.

Remember, too, that a preschooler's activity level varies greatly from day to day and from child to child. A very active toddler may eat twice as much as a more sedentary child.

Also, the feeling that your child is "eating like a bird" may be something of an optical illusion. On the average, a 2-year-old needs only 1,300 calories a day, and a 5-year-old requires about 1,600. That amount of food may look very small when compared to what's on his parents' plates.

—"My youngster wants to eat at strange times." This can be a problem if you let it become one. No mother should be a short-order cook for her family. But at the same time, there's no reason why a person should become hungry only three times a day. Active children do get hungry at strange times, but you can train a child to help himself to snacks that have been set aside for this purpose. Things like a hard-boiled egg, fruit, a peanut butter sandwich or a piece of cheese are satisfying and nutritious snacks. But avoid keeping things like soft drinks, candy or cookies handy for youngsters' snacking.

—"My child never finishes a meal." For the sake of family relations and convenience, a child should eat at least the main meal with the rest of the family. But, given the vagaries of a preschooler's appetite, he or she may not be very hungry then. Too large servings are discouraging to a child — and they also encourage the parent to nag "clean your plate." Let the youngster serve himself as soon as he's able, and urge him to take small portions with the option of going back for "seconds." Remember, too, that young children get tired of trying to cope with adult-size forks and spoons. An offer to help may solve that problem.

—"My preschooler seems to like only desserts." The best way to minimize this nutrional problem — for the whole family — is to serve nutritious desserts, such as fruit, milk pudding, ice cream or ice milk. You also might try letting a child have dessert when he says he wants no more dinner, leaving the unfinished plate of food on the table. Many children will go back to the main course after dessert if the plate is still there.

—"My youngster simply doesn't like what the rest of us eat." To a certain extent, he's entitled. After all, we adults often dislike certain foods. If a child dislikes a few foods, there's no need to worry. Nutrients in most foods can be obtained from others. But if he shuns whole classes of foods, such as vegetables or meats, it's probably a temporary phase. In the meantime, do not nag or use strong-arm tactics. Instead, look for nutritional equivlents. For example, cheese, eggs, fish and poultry are good substitutes for meat, and a sufficient variety of fruits can substitute for vegetables.

Finally, try to make meals a pleasant, relaxing experience for the entire family. Most preschoolers do outgrow their eating vagaries. If your youngster is healthy and offered the right food, he'll take in the nourishment he needs — especially if you set a good example.

'BABY TALK' HAS TO GO

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Our 6-year-old son still has a tendency to speak like a younger child. When is the best time to start treatment for this problem? Should we go along with the idea that he'll outgrow it?—Mrs. T.C.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Now, right now, is the ideal time to begin speech therapy. A speech disorder is a distinct handicap. It is estimated that more than two million children have speech defects which interfere with their social relationships and with their scholastic achievement.

Adults, too, often pay a penalty for speech defects that were traced to childhood and were expected to disappear by themselves.

Childhood speech is often charming, and sometimes the child is encouraged to persist in that manner of speaking long after it should have stopped.

Speech may account for a child's acceptance or rejection by classmates in the formative years. If the speech is babyish, he is teased and mimicked. The psychological impact is obvious.

The first approach to the problem should be a complete examination of the nose, throat and vocal apparatus. Speech problems may be caused by a small band of tissue that ties down the tongue or a malformation of the jaw or palate. Habit pattern that distort speech are easily acquired. Allowing them to continue without any form of treatment tends to make them fixed and difficult to eradicate.

The science of speech therapy has made enormous strides in the past 20 years. Almost all large university centres, medical schools and hospitals have speech departments. Newly developed techniques and electronic instruments can "chart" a speech defect, establish the reasons for it and outline the ideal form of treatment.

Since children learn to speak by mimicking those who surround them, good hearing is essential to learning. Far too often an undisclosed hearing impairment may be responsible for a child's speech defect. Once the exact cause is determined, intensive treatment by speech therapists is essential. The advantages of speech therapy are great, but it must be emphasized that a delay in beginning it only serves to make the results more difficult to attain.

Little attention is paid to the fact that squash and racquet ball players are subject to special dangers, especially when glasses are worn.

It has been suggested that industrial plastic safety lenses be worn, mounted in strong frames, in order to avoid the impact of both the ball and racquet.

So you find an apartment where the price is right and you are eager to sign the lease. If utilities are not included, wait until you call the utility company to learn what the previous tenant paid during the coldest and hottest months.

How easy and energy efficient it is to cook enough sauce and spaghetti for a meal now and a casserole to freeze for later. But don't cook-to-tender the spaghetti for the casserole. If you do, the pasta will be too pastey when you reheat the casserole.

Bio-dex

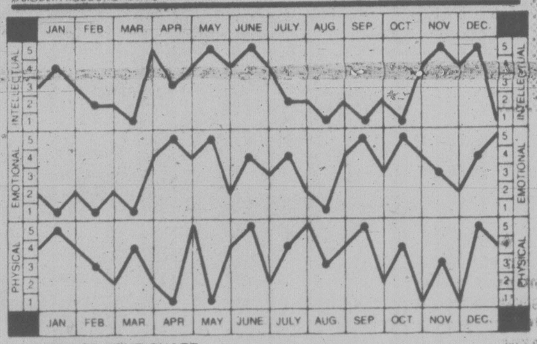
Aug. 11/78

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Life may seem too predictable. You're bored and need to activate yourself again.

There are times for interaction with others, and times for solitude. It's no good burying your problems in superficial socializing, nor will it help to lie around the house brooding a problem into monstrous proportions. Of course, when your Bio-dex is low, you look at the gloomy side of life. Don't give in. You must find a balance and work hard to maintain it.

DEAR ABBY: Why can't women be as broad-minded as men? We've been married 15 years, and my wife is doing a super job with our home and children, but she's letting a small incident she happened to witness make a difference in our lives.

Now, you're a business woman, Abby, and you know how hard it is to keep a good secretary. Mine has been with me for five years and she does a great job. She's always on time, she's efficient, and the price is right.

Well, last week my wife dropped in at the office, and she happened to see me hug my secretary. I've made friendly gestures like this for some time to show I appreciate her, but now my wife is steamed, and she's giving me a hard time.

Abby, will you please say something in your column about how hard it is to find a good secretary? JULIUS

DEAR JULIUS: A good plumber is also hard to find! I mean one who comes immediately when you call him, has all the parts he needs with him and does the job at a price that's right. How would you like to come home and find your wife "showing her appreciation" by hugging him?

The next time you want to show your "appreciation," try money.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader that you took Catholic instruction to better understand Catholicism — "to learn, not turn." What a beautiful idea! I'm Catholic and regularly read publications of other religions.

Our small parish has conducted a weekly series where ministers and pastors are invited to tell us about their beliefs and show us their churches (unfortunately, there is no synagogue nearby).

I hope your example prompts others among your millions of readers to become more curious and understanding, and less prejudiced and blindly accusative.

A.M., JR.

DEAR A.M.: So do I. Prejudice is based on ignorance. I can't stress strongly enough the importance of learning about religions that differ from our own.
